World's Labor Urged to Unite To Prevent War

Green Sees Strife as Near, Issues Call at Convention.

Appeal Supported By British Leader

Workers Warned Not to Give Up Weapons in Trade Truce.

San Francisco, Oct. 3 (AP).—Workers of the world "must unite solidly in order to prevent what seems to be an approaching war," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the organization's annual convention today.

"We believe that the purpose and spirit of the workers of the world is to see that war never occurs again," Green declared.

"We abhor war in all its forms, and workers of the world must unite solidly in order to prevent what seems to be an approaching war.

"We can not allow those with a mad lust for power to have their way. They must not be allowed to command the masses of the people to march out on the field of battle and destroy each other.

"We hope the relationship between the labor organizations of the various countries will grow stronger and stronger."

Reechoed by Briton.

Green made his remarks in introducing John Stokes, of London, fraternal delegate of the British Trade Union Congress.

"We English-speaking peoples have a fundamental and common purpose in the maintenance of peace," Stokes said. "I reecho all that President Green has said.

"We workers must not allow a repetition of the great world catastrophe."

A warning to organized workers not to surrender their weapons in any industrial truce with employers was given to the federation by Joseph A. Padway, Milwaukee labor attorney.

Speaking of President Roosevelt's proposal Sunday night for "a trial period of industrial peace" through commitments by both employers and employes, Padway said:

"Does the President suggest we surrender our weapons, our right to bargain collectively, our privilege to insist on our rights under section 7(a) (the collective bargaining clause of the NRA)?

"I do not think he does, but I do know the employers believe that."

Green, who had announced he would go to Washington after the convention to discuss the truce proposal with Government officials, made no comment on Padway's statements.

Green likewise received in

Outlaw Gangs Loot 2 Towns

Wisconsin Hamlet Held 2 Hours; Raiders 'Take' Missouri Village.

Shawano, Wis., Oct. 3 (AP).—Gresham, a village of 300 persons 10 miles west of here, was taken over for two hours today by three robbers who blew the safe of the State Bank and fired upon residents attempting to prevent their escape with $4,000.

No one was injured.

The robbers entered Gresham about 2 a. m. They cut telephone wires, extinguished street lights and used heavy doors from a nearby grain elevator to make a sentry box in front of the bank.

One man was left in the lookout station while his companions entered the bank.

For an hour and a half the two cracksmen worked at the vault. A dynamite charge hurled part of the safe into the street and wrecked the interior of the building.

As quickly as lights appeared in neighboring houses, the lookout tried to shoot them out.

The robbers escaped in an automobile driven by a fourth man.

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 3 (AP).—A band of youthful outlaws swarmed down on the little town of Billings, 25 miles southwest of here, early today, tied up and robbed two peace officers, imprisoned four hoboes and the officers in a box car, and escaped with $300 worth of merchandise stolen from the Farmers' Exchange.

Two Brothers Slain; Their $200 Missing

Alice, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP).—The bullet-riddled bodies of Homer Dobbs, 32, and Virgil Dobbs, 16, farmer brothers from San Juan, Tex., were found in a pasture near Alice today. About $200 they were believed to have carried was missing.

The men had been shot twice in the back. Officers expressed belief that they had been shot after they fell, as bullets were found buried in the ground under their faces.

Gas Routs 500 At Mill; 1 Dead And Many Hurt

Bystander Shot by Deputy as Bricks Are Hurled in Textile Riot.

Bridgeport, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP).—A bystander was shot to death and numerous persons were injured or overcome by tear gas in strike riots today near the James Lees & Sons Co. textile mill.

The man killed—Ellwood Quirk, 23—was hit in the stomach by a bullet police said was fired by a deputy sheriff. He was returning home from work in another mill at the time. Quirk died in a Norristown hospital soon after being wounded.

The strike has been in progress since September 4. Workers refused to go back at the time the general textile strike was called off because they charged discrimination was shown in rehiring strikers.

Union officials said that about 130 of the 1,500 normally employed answered the whistle yesterday. The final, fatal flare-up of an afternoon of brick-hurling occurred as office workers started to leave the mill in several automobiles.

Their cars were followed by another automobile containing five or

Textile Union Agrees to Aid In Trial Truce

Gorman Gives President Cooperation Pledge, Fears New Strike.

Acceptance of President Roosevelt's proposal for a trial period of industrial peace was announced yesterday by one of the strong unions, the United Textile Workers.

Mr. Roosevelt, still enthusiastic over the possibility of a truce between capital and labor, resumed conferences on the peace plan and recovery measures. The program probably will take definite shape after the American Federation of Labor convention in San Francisco.

The President yesterday consulted Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, authority on labor legislation; William C. Potter, of the Guarantee Trust Co., New York, and Hugh S. Johnson, retiring NRA administrator.

Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the textile union, was the first representative of organized labor to approve formally the suggested truce. In a letter to the President, he promised his group would agree to six months of peace.

Warns of New Strike.

Renewal of the recent textile strike impends, Gorman warned, "unless the peaceful methods described by you can be brought into swift and effective action."

If the employers agree to a truce, Gorman wrote, the union will permit "no stoppage of work" during the trial period in protest against any findings of the new Textile Labor Relations Board or the National Labor Relations Board.

The unionist complained, however, that thousands of employes had been denied work because they participated in the strike. He said manufacturers in many instances

Money Magic Temporary, Wallace Says

Secretary's Book Sees Good Result From Devaluation.

'Economic Democracy' Is Need; Denies Reply to Hoover.

Roosevelt monetary policies are "money magic" and can give only temporary relief to stricken American trade, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace writes in his latest book, "New Frontiers," published yesterday.

The American people might as well stop kidding themselves, says the Cabinet member. The problem of tariffs, trade and surpluses must be faced ultimately.

Wallace claims dollar devaluation was necessary and did much for the Nation.

"President Roosevelt's monetary policy has undoubtedly helped enormously the producers of those products which are on the export market," the book continues. "France at this writing is paying about twice as much for cotton in terms of dollars as she did early in 1933, but she is paying only 20 per cent more in terms of gold francs.

Temporary Money Magic.

"All this, of course, is temporary money magic; it can not last indefinitely."

Wallace warns against uncontrolled inflation as the road to ruin and dictatorship. He says money can not be manipulated to enable foreign nations to buy our cotton, wheat, lard and tobacco as they did before the war. He thinks monetary manipulation plus the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund may continue existing benefits several years, but then the real problem must be faced.

"Raising the price of gold in the United States will not serve permanently to restore foreign purchasing power for our surplus farm products," he argues. "To solve that we shall have either to import more physical goods from abroad or else stop producing so much for export."

Wallace would restore our foreign markets by having AAA continue for "a good many years," keeping 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 acres of plow land out of production while the Yankee trading reciprocal tariff authority voted President Roosevelt is being put into effect. He thinks that is the best way out of the hole.

Critics Under Fire.

The Secretary says we must point to "economic democracy" rather than to the extremes of Fascism or Communism. He jibes at Administrative critics; says the famed Committee for the Nation seemed more interested in hiking speculative prices than in anything else when it demanded dollar devaluation.

Through Dr. William A. Wirt, who discovered a "red plot" among Administration brain trusters, Wal-

Suspect Is Seized In Attack on Two

Escort of Girl Identifies Alleged Assailant.

Alexander Jones, 35, colored, alias "Alabama Slim," was arrested yesterday by Third Precinct police as a suspect in the attack Sunday night on a 16-year-old schoolgirl and her escort. Police also broadcast a description of another suspect in the case.

The attack took place near Oliver street and Kirkside drive in Chevy Chase, Md. The youth, who was escorting the daughter of a Government official, was beaten on the head with the butt of a revolver.

Jones, who lives in the 2400 block of I street northwest, was identified by the girl's escort as one of the assailants, according to police. He is being held for Maryland authorities.

'Dizzy' Dean Defeats Tigers in Opener, 8-3; Rowe Pitches Today

(Sports Editor of The Post).

Navin Field, Detroit, Oct. 3.—Caught in the spell of Dizzy Dean's pitching prowess, seized by a severe case of the "jitters" and raked by a running fire of St. Louis base hits, the Detroit Tigers today surrendered the first game of the world series to the Cardinals by a score of 8 to 3.

Tonight manager Mickey Cochrane announced he will stake his chances on Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe, his sensational young pitcher, while Frankie Frisch nominated "Wild Bill" Hallahan as his choice to make two straight for the Cards.

The complete supremacy of the Cardinals over their Tigers stifled the emotional valves of Detroit fans among the 42,505 who thronged this

Kin of Gloria Rush Home to Deny Scandal

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Brother and Sister to Board Fast Liner.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Vanderbilt-Whitney court battle for possession of little Gloria Vanderbilt apparently was headed for a finish fight tonight as a brother and sister of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt arranged to rush from Paris to deny charges she is an unfit mother for the $4,000,000 heiress.

Adjournment of hearings in the sensational case until Friday brought conjecture on a possible settlement, but it was denied promptly.

"There is no chance for any settlement," bluntly asserted Herbert C. Smyth, counsel for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Gloria's aunt, who is vigorously opposing her sister-in-law's efforts to win custody of the child.

To Rush From Paris.

While attorneys for Mrs. Vanderbilt used the brief respite to work on their answer to the charges against her, a twin sister, the former Thelma Morgan, divorced wife of Lord Furness, disclosed at Paris that she and her brother would board a fast liner Saturday to come to their sister's assistance.

The former Lady Furness also denied there was anything improper in the visits of Prince Hohenlohe to the Vanderbilt villa at Biarritz.

Edwards Told Of Killing Girl, Police Testify

'Let Her Have It With Blackjack,' Is Story Laid to Youth.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP).—"I got my blackjack and let her have it."

Thus, police authorities testified today, Robert Allen Edwards confessed he killed his former sweetheart, Freda McKechnie, even as he was courting another.

The trial of this real-life "American tragedy" rushed to its climax with the presentation of the statements the young coal mine surveyor is alleged to have made to police—after Freda's body was found floating in Harveys Lake.

Repudiated since by the defendant, the contents of the statement were given to the jury of coal miners, shopkeepers and hillside farmers over the objections of defense attorneys.

Jury Gets Confessions.

After witnesses had presented extracts from the alleged confessions during the day, the Commonwealth prosecutors read the text of the statements to the jury at a night session, after continued objections had been overruled.

At the same time the Commonwealth offered in evidence 170 letters purportedly written by the accused surveyor to Margaret Crain, the "other girl" in the tragic

Alienists See Hauptmann; Trial Oct. 11

Defense Denied 60-Day Wait; Bronx Court Fight First.

Five Physicians Question Captive; Gold Note Alibi Hit Again.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a stolid German carpenter, faced a battery of expert alienists tonight in a sanity test as Bronx County prosecutors won their demand for an early trial—to begin October 11—on charges that he extorted $50,000 kidnap ransom from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Behind the locked doors of District Attorney Samuel J. Foley's office, the five physicians plied the suspect with questions, tested his reactions and subjected him to the minute examination by which science determines whether a man's brain is normal.

Two of the psychiatric experts represented New Jersey, where Hauptmann is expected to face an accusation of complicity in the kidnap slaying itself. Two others were there for District Attorney Foley and the fifth for the defense counsel.

Test Resumed Friday.

After questioning Hauptmann for more than two hours, the alienists left the district attorney's office without making any statement. Officials said the sanity test had not been completed and would be resumed Friday.

Hauptmann was sullen throughout the long probing, it was learned from one official witness, answered questions in an undertone and rarely looked at the physicians. The alienists did not express any opinion as to Hauptmann's sanity, but asked for further opportunity to observe him.

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, the prisoner's wife, and their 10-month-old son, awaited in an adjoining room for the conclusion of the examination and attaches of the district attorney's office said they would be permitted a short visit together.

Identified by Ticket Seller.

Before the experts examined the carpenter, Miss Cecil M. Barr, a theater ticket seller, identified Hauptmann as the man who shoved one of the Lindbergh ransom bills through the grill of her cage last November 26—apparently the earliest date that Hauptmann has been connected with the ransom currency.

Hauptmann has claimed that he did not spend any of the ransom money until three weeks before his arrest. He told officials that it was in a box given him by the late Isadore Fisch and that he was unaware of the parcel's contents until then.

Authorities said Miss Barr's identification was positive.

Overriding defense objections that more time was needed to prepare its case, County Judge James M. Barrett earlier fixed October 11 for the beginning of the extortion trial.

Delay to Aid Jersey.

Although District Attorney Foley insisted on the early trial date, it was learned that the joint plans of the Bronx County and New Jersey authorities contemplated sufficient delay to allow the Jersey prosecutors to complete their case before Hauptmann is brought before a jury here.

Foley's statement to the court

Cow's Tail Worth $50.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—A cow's tail is worth $50, Berkshire County Commissioners decided in upholding a damage suit brought by Mark Drumm, of Stockbridge, against the owner of a dog that chewed the bossy's fly-swatter off. The commissioners agreed with Drumm that insect annoyance after loss of the tail reduced the cow's value as a milk-giver.

Congress to Get Four Programs To Aid Carriers

Transportation Problem Major Job for New Deal in 1935.

Eastman Is Busy Collecting Data

Reports to Deal With Subsidies, Bus Line Competition.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Prospects of legislative relief for the Nation's railroads brightened yesterday on announcement by President Roosevelt that Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, is completing four important reports as the basis for action at the next session of Congress.

Although he declared it too early for final decision, explaining that certain details remain to be clarified, there appeared little room for doubt that a broad program of legislation, affecting all forms of transportation, will be one of the major New Deal contributions to the 1935 session.

A preliminary outline of the four studies underway was made to the President at Tuesday's meeting of the National Executive Council. These reports, it was explained by Mr. Roosevelt, will cover the following subjects:

The extent transportation agencies are subsidized, directly or indirectly, by the Government.

Wages and working conditions of employes of carriers other than railroads, together with a comparison.

Pooling of freight cars, with recommendation that all box cars be operated on a pool basis.

Railroad passenger traffic.

To Push Bus Control.

Legislation to place bus and truck companies on a competitive equality with the railroads, by bringing them under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was recommended by the coordinator and introduced at the last session of Congress. This proposal, which got no further than committee hearings, is expected to be pushed in the new program.

The subjects studied in the first two of the new Eastman reports have long agitated the railroads, which contend that motor carriers, waterway traffic and air lines have benefited greatly by Government help at the expense of the railroads, and that rail workers, on the whole, are much better paid than the employes of their competitors.

Whereas the railroads are forced to construct and maintain rights-of-way, contribute heavy taxes and suffer the increased costs of intricate regulation, they argue that motor, water and air carriers have the use of public highways, public-supported inland waterways, and air lanes marked and lighted by the Government.

First Report on Subject.

The extent to which this contention is true is expected to be disclosed by the Eastman report, the first of its sort ever compiled.

The subject of car pooling, a system under which the railroads use one another's freight cars interchangeably, in the interest of economy, is now before the three regional coordinating committees set up by Mr. Eastman. The study of passenger traffic, a voluminous work, will include the results of a questionnaire widely distributed last summer among business men and others.

New evidence of the sympathy with which the Administration views the railroads, driven to their knees by failing returns, came with the recent election of John J. Pelley as president of the new Association of American Railroads. One of the first railway executives to align himself with the Administration, Mr. Pelley is understood to have accepted his new position with something more than hope for better treatment.

Harvard Bars Gift Proffered By Hitler Aid

Hanfstaengl Advised Nazi Regime Is Inimical to All Universities.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Because the Hitler regime with which he is associated has "struck at principles we believe to be fundamental to universities throughout the world," Harvard University tonight announced its rejection of the $1,000 German traveling scholarship offered to it by Dr. Ernst F. S. Hanfstaengl, Nazi press agent, last May.

The scholarship, intended to enable an outstanding Harvard student to study in Germany for one year, was offered in a letter Hanfstaengl sent from Berlin to President James Bryan Conant, of Harvard, on May 24. Later Hanfstaengl, a graduate of the Harvard College class of 1909, came to Cambridge for the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of his class. His arrival resulted in a series of anti-Nazi demonstrations, but the visiting Nazi official was unmolested.

The Harvard Corporation did not consider the scholarship offer until its fall meeting on September 24, it was announced. Then it voted

GHQ Air Unit Will Comprise 1,000 Planes

Five 'Wings' Based on Both Coasts and Midwest Are Envisioned.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Army chief of staff, outlined the new general headquarters air force today as a sky-fighting fleet of at least 1,000 bombing, pursuit and attack planes in five "wings," based on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts and in the Middle West.

MacArthur, who will direct the new air armada, emphasized that with bombardment and pursuit wings on each coast and an attack wing in the Midwest, the greatest possible mobility would be given to the Nation's aerial defense.

In other Army quarters it was indicated the Atlantic wing would be concentrated at Langley Field, and the Pacific wings at March and Rockwell Fields. The attack wing, under this plan, would be based at Fort Crockett, Galveston, Tex., or Selfridge Field.

Danforth May Be Chief.

There was authoritative indication, also, that Col. Charles H. Danforth, now at Langley Field, where headquarters for the new force will be maintained, has been selected tentatively by the general staff to command the armada. MacArthur declined to comment on this report.

Although the complete plan has not yet been perfected, it is understood the commander will be given the rank of major general. The five wings would be commanded by flying colonels, MacArthur said:

"Each wing should have at least 200 planes, although the size should be left flexible. The entire force should represent at least 1,000 planes.

"In ur aerial defense we should have two elements, part and parcel of our other forces — the observation groups which function di-

Shot in Richmond Break, Guard Dies

2 Others Wounded; Mother of Mais Accused.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Police Officer W. A. Toots, shot by Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, condemned murderers, in their successful break from the Richmond City Jail last Saturday, died tonight at Memorial Hospital.

Toots was one of three officers wounded by the notorious gangsters as they shot their way out of the jail with pistols authorities believe were smuggled to them in a can purporting to hold a roasted chicken. The other two officers were less seriously injured.

A widespread search has been conducted for the escaped men, sentenced to death for the murder of E. M. Husband, Federal Reserve mail truck driver.

Yesterday Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, 57-year-old mother of one of the gangsters, was placed under formal arrest, charged with smuggling the pistols in to them. She admitted having taken canned goods and coffee to her son at various times, but denied she took the chicken can into the jail.

Devil's Island Fugitives Tell How They Fled Dread Prison

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Oct. 3 (AP). Perils of their escape from the dread French penal colony at Devil's Island were recounted by two fugitives today at the end of an 800-mile sea journey under the broiling tropical sun in a leaky, poorly provisioned Indian dugout.

Weak from thirst and exposure, Jean Petiot and Leroux Maurice reached here a few days ago with two other prisoners who had accompanied them on the long, hazarduous trip in the tiny boat. They were permitted to rest in Port of Spain before pushing off again for Haiti in their dugout.

When they decided to attempt escape, Maurice had completed ten years of a life sentence for killing his wife, while Petiot had served only ten months of a ten-year sentence for robbery.

Money came to them from Petiot's wife in France. Natives sold them a boat and hid it at an advantageous spot. Petoit got into the hospital. A few days later Maurice visited him. They strolled in the hospital inclosure. A moment came when no guards were about, Maurice boosted Petiot over the wall and climbed over after him.

By prearrangement the other men, Henri Cahrrier and Jules Before, had escaped from another part of the prison and the four met in a clump of bushes. There they hid while wardens searched the district. Then, under cover of darkness, they raced for the shore and hastily put to sea in the little open boat.

For 150 miles, up the coast of French Guiana, the quartet paddled, their food and water exhausted, until finally they touched the coast of Dutch Guiana and were cared for by friendly natives.

For the rest of the 650 miles they clung closely to the shore, putting in frequently for repairs as their frail craft sprang leaks. It was weeks before they reached Port of Spain, their clothing in tatters, their bodies baked almost black by the blazing sun.

Six other fugitives reached here just before them, while five more came shortly after. Police and the Salvation Army fed and clothed all, the government having no extradition treaty with France covering prisoners escaping from Devils Island. Nor does France make any effort to get them back.

Insull Bond Buyer One of His Jurymen

Chosen for Trial After Saying Holdings Have Aroused No Prejudice; Chief Defendant Shows Only Casual Interest.

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—A jury of 12 men—farmer, banker, grocer, salesmen, and jobless—was sworn today to sit in judgment upon Samuel Insull, sr., and the 16 men who were masters, with him, of the $143,000,000 Corporation Securities Co., now in ruins.

The setting was complete for the trial of the 17 big business men charged with selling i a: company's worthless stock by mail.

The jurors, whose verdict might be prison, fines or freedom, presented a varied appearance. Next to an unemployed salesman, jobless for months, sat a former banker. Another was a retired factory manager who said he and his wife owned plenty of Insull bonds, but it wouldn't prejudice him.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson administered the oath to the 12 after a day and a half of cautious maneuvering by Government and defense attorneys.

The jurors — George Barclay, Yorkville, Ill., garage proprietor and former sheriff of Kendall County; Walter J. Cassidy, Chicago, an insurance salesman; William Austin, Richmond, McHenry County, a farmer; Louis Bending, Woodstock, Ill., a grocer; Edward Hawkens, Oak Park, Ill., unemployed; Roy C. Richardson, Chicago, a salesman; W. A. Westbrook, Millington, Ill., a grain dealer; Charles H. Wilson, Chicago, coal salesman; Walter R. Valters, Chicago, a bookbinder and musician; John D. Lent, Peru, Ill., retired board of trade member; John Shults, Minooka, lumber dealer; Philip H. Kitsch, Chicago, unemployed clerk.

Two alternate jurors sworn in were Charles F. Kelly, a stationary fireman, of Joliet, Ill., and Aaron Levy, of Chicago, a floor-covering salesman. They were chosen in the belief the trial might extend far into the winter.

Insull, the chief defendant, accepted the completion of the jury with only a casual show of interest. Samuel Insull, jr., another defendant, leaned forward on his elbows and chewed gum intently. The other defendants chatted and exchanged notes.

3 Dead, 35 Injured In Chemical Explosion

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Three persons were hurt and 35 others, including 15 women, imperiled today in a chemical explosion in the basement of the Wilson Pharmaceutical Laboratories. As the employes fled from the building they escaped a falling mass of debris as the upper floor of the two-story brick structure collapsed.

The basement was flooded with sulphuric acid, hampering the efforts of firemen to clear up the wreckage. The cause of the blast was unknown.

Butler Cut Off Radio Hook-Up As Fiery Words Irk Manager

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 3 (AP).—The Veterans of Foreign Wars today approved Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler's being cut off a Nation-wide radio hook-up, explaining that while his language was not objectionable to the veterans, "it may have been to a mixed radio audience."

The former head of the Marines was cut off a WEAF-NBC chain by Station WAVE of Louisville after he had used the expression, "making fertilizer out of food," and other language to which Nate C. Lord, manager of WAVE, took exception. WEAF-NBC issued a statement indorsing Lord's action. Lord said he previously had noted such expressions as "hell," "lousy," and "red light district," and that he decided the language violated Federal radio regulations and that it had become necessary to cut the general off.

Gen. Butler was making an impromptu talk to the veterans' National convention here and when he had four and a half minutes left of the 30 minutes allowed on the air, he was discussing conditions among the unemployed. The transcript by L. L. Walsh, of Ridgewood, N. J., official convention stenographer, quoted him:

"I have traveled all over Pennsylvania. I have seen miners of the soldier class living in coke ovens, 400,000 of them starving in Philadelphia, while you fellows out here are making fertilizer out of food."

At that point he was cut off without anybody in the audience knowing of it, and later he explained he was referring to the AAA hog-killing program, and had used the phrase in previous talks without anyone raising an objection.

"If the NBC has cut me off the air," he continued, "that is something for them to explain; I have nothing to say about it."

En route to catch a train for Detroit afterward, he added: "People are allowed to say what they like in abusing our soldiers, but when a man takes their part he is cut off."

Reed Charges Democrat Rule Of Home Loans

Demands Probe of System in Pennsylvania; Says Guffey Still Boss.

Declaring that a "shockingly unsatisfactory administration" of the Federal Home Loan Bank act exists in Pennsylvania, Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, yesterday requested John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank board, to make an immediate investigation.

He said that if the inquiry by the board is not satisfactory he will lay the matter before the Senate when Congress convenes and demand a sweeping investigation of partisan politics in the affairs of the home loan system.

Senator Reed placed responsibility for the conditions of which he complained on the shoulders of his Democratic opponent for the Senate, Joseph F. Guffey. The latter, as Democratic leader of the State, passed on the home loan officials in Pennsylvania, and, while some of the major officers have been replaced, Guffey appointees still hold the minor places, Senator Reed asserted.

The leaders in the Guffey organization, he added, through their hold on minor appointees, "have continued their political interference in a governmental function which should be completely divorced from politics, with the result that many thousands of Pennsylvanians have lost their homes, which otherwise might have been saved, while others have been forced to obtain introductions or make some secret arrangement with Democratic county chairmen before they could obtain loans which would have their properties.

"I have been told within a week,' he continued, "that in one Pennsylvania county 1,900 applications for loans, made in good faith by distressed property owners, were being held on the desk of the Democratic chairman. This information came not from a partisan source, but from a disappointed and disgusted member of the home loan organization.

"I have received communications from another county saying that applicants for loans can not get action on their applications unless they bring a letter from the Democratic county chairman. I know of other instances in which Democratic favorites have been permitted to fix the appraisals on which loans are based, thus giving them larger loans than could be obtained otherwise. These are only a few of the abuses which have resulted from Mr. Guffey's efforts to use the home loan system for partisan and personal advantage."

Between You and Me

Party Labels Continue to Go Overboard, With the Simms Latest Bolters.

By Raymond Clapper

IT is going to take years to untangle the mixed pedigrees that will result from this election campaign. Not in years have party tags meant so little—and they are meaning less every day as current develpoments show.

There is the case of Mark Hanna's daughter, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, and her husband, former Representative Albert G. Simms, of New Mexico. He is Republican National committeeman for his State, a prominent banker in the community and, hitherto, as regular as a bill collector. His wife was a Republican member of Congress from Illinois. After National suffrage she organized Republican women and for some years dictated the feminine side of the party's affairs.

Now they are bolting the Republican ticket in New Mexico, which is headed by Senator Bronson Cutting. They say he is not a real Republican. He certainly is not the kind of a Republican that Daughter Ruth's sturdy father was when he steered William McKinley into the White House and took a seat behind the throne.

So the Simms family is going to support Representative Dennis Chavez, the Democratic candidate for Senator. He isn't a Republican either. He voted just about 100 per cent for the New Deal—for AAA, NRA, TVA, CWA, gold revaluation, silver, the securities and stock exchange bills. A new device will have to be added to the political coat-of-arms of the Simms family after this.

If the Bull Moose party of 20 years ago still shows birthmarks of vigorous men like Ickes and Richberg—in spite of the fact that Henry Wallace says the Progressives of 1912 are grandmothers in political thinking today — what marks will the New Deal leave to confuse future genealogists? Some say wings and some say horns. In any case the marks will be there. Senator Hiram Johnson, of long Republican-Bull Moose lineage, is now listed by the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee as a Democrat. He has both party nominations. Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Republican candidate in Michigan, has taken on the protective coloring of the New Deal and doesn't want regular Republican campaign speakers coming into his State to stamp him as an anti-Roosevelt candidate.

It's even hard to tell by President Roosevelt's speeches from just which party he is drawing his inspiration. In his latest radio address he summoned to his support that venerable elder statesman of the Republican party, once the No. 1 corporation lawyer in the country, Elihu Root. He pointed to Abraham Lincoln. The godfather of the Democratic party, Thomas Jefferson, and its later stalwart, Grover Cleveland, were left to rest in peace, and Woodrow Wilson was bracketed with Fifth Cousin Theodore in bare mention.

It long has been known that Felix Frankfurter operates by remote control from his sanctuary in the Harvard Law School through numerous bright young lawyers he has planted in key positions through the New Deal structure—such as Frank at AAA, Lilienthal at TVA, Landis at SEC, and Calvert Magruder, who has just become counsel of the National Labor Relations Board. Now it develops that his sister is research expert at the labor board, which is, through decisions like that in the Houde case, writing a new labor policy for the Administration.

Dr. Rex Tugwell—whatever happened to him?—was licked in his fight to tighten up the pure food and drug act, but the campaign is far from over. One employe of the Agriculture Department's food and drug division is writing a book entitled "Frauds," which, according to advance reports, will stir up the whole subject again. The idea is that it will do in this field what Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle" did to bring about Federal inspection of meat packing.

NRA appears to be settling down for a long, steady pull. Theatricals, by which Gen. Johnson laid so much store, are frowned upon by suave Donald Richberg, the guiding hand in the new set-up. He apparently feels that a long-time job has been thrown into his lap, because he is giving up the house he has rented furnished and has brought his own household goods from Chicago and installed them in his new home in Kenwood.

Richberg's steadying influence already is changing the atmosphere at NRA. The frenzied turmoil of the Johnson period is gone. The organization has steadied down for smooth, quiet work. The contrast is like that between a motion picture portrayal of a newspaper office with reporters tearing telephones off the walls in their excitement and a real newspaper office where, when a big story breaks, every one is too busy working to jump over chairs. The chief cause of anxiety at NRA is the concern of employes over their jobs. That has diminished greatly, although it has not disappeared.

Chamberlain Dampens Hope Of Firm Money

British Chancellor Says Sterling Will Remain Independent.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Prospects for international stablization of currencies, so greatly desired by business in this country, were greatly diminished by the speech which Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the British exchequer, made Tuesday night at the annual lord mayor's bankers' dinner, according to comment in financial and diplomatic quarters here yesterday.

One of the questions propounded to President Roosevelt by the directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce was when he proposed to take steps for currency stabilization. In his Sunday night speech the President ignored that inquiry. But business received its answer from Mr. Chamberlain, it was thought yesterday.

In view of Mr. Chamberlain's assertion that the British government intended to maintain the independence of sterling from any link with other currency systems, which he specifically addressed to this country, the opinion prevailed that all moves toward currency stabilization must be indefinitely postponed.

British Aid Necessary.

Without active British cooperation any movement toward stabilization of currencies would be futile, it was contended here. The British chancellor left no doubt that such cooperation would be withheld. Not only did he declare for the continued independence of sterling but he held that serious difficulties beset the stimulation of foreign trade and that further international conferences on these subjects probably would lead nowhere.

Pointing out that the difficulties of international trade appear to be increasing rather than decreasing, the chancellor asserted that "unfortunately it is impossible for one government to reopen the channels of international trade by its own volition or influence the policies of other countries which are subject to their own internal exigencies."

This observation was regarded as interesting in view of the effort which has been under way for almost a year through George Peek, foreign trade adviser to the President, to stimulate international business and the effort now being made to increase American exports through the making of reciprocal trade agreements.

Mr. Chamberlain's remarks bearing on the British monetary position were taken in one quarter here as confirmation of the belief that the English have not at any time since that country abandoned the gold standard wished to stabilize and that they used the United States delegation at the London economic and monetary conference as a buffer against the gold standard countries.

At all events, the chancellor's pointed speech was taken to mean that the British do not now want stabilization. In one quarter the view has been expressed within the last few days that the weakening of the pound to a point close to the old parity presented an ideal opportunity for an arrangement with Great Britain.

Calls Weakness Seasonal.

Mr. Chamberlain met that thought by reassuring his audience that the weakness in sterling was "seasonal" and nothing "more than a passing phase" and that too much attention should not be paid to keeping sterling at a particular level.

As if in reply to the suggestion in President Roosevelt's Sunday night speech that the British had used "unorthodox" measures in their pursuit of recovery, Mr. Chamberlain stressed the balanced budget, the rigid policy of public economy and the restraint in interfering with private enterprise of his country during recent months. He said that the Government's course had been "ultra-conservative" and he deprecated comparisons between countries, pointing out that each must do what is best fitted for its needs and temperament.

Glad It's All Over Declares 'Robbie' On Quitting NRA

Now that Hugh S. Johnson has resigned from the NRA, Miss Frances Robinson, his administrative assistant, is "glad it's all over," the Associated Press says.

"I didn't realize how tired I was until it was over," she said yesterday. "I think I must have been running on nervous energy. When we stopped I found myself exhausted."

As for Johnson's business connection upon returning to private life, and incidentally her own job, "Robbie" said she assumed he would return to his work under Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier.

"Gen. Johnson never really resigned that post," she said. "He was given a leave of absence at the President's request to come here for this work."

Farm Booklets Used in Drive By Democrats

Free Pamphlets Offered to Candidates in G. O. P. Strongholds.

By Robert C. Albright.

A cleverly devised plan to move Administration farm literature into rockbound Republican Congressional districts has been thrown into operation by the financially embarrassed Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Lacking funds to broadcast campaign propaganda into the States, the committee is advising Democratic candidates how they can accomplish the same result without expense to themselves, but with some discomfort to their Republican opponents.

Foreword by Roosevelt.

There is one pamphlet in particular the committee wants to put into campaign circulation. It is entitled, "Achieving a Balanced Agriculture," has a foreword by President Roosevelt, and explains in 52 neatly printed pages what it calls "The Why of Agricultural Adjustment."

Each member of Congress is entitled to 100 copies, but, according to the Democrats, Republican members are not rushing in headlong with over-quota orders.

So the following letter was dispatched to Democratic candidates on the campaign battlefront:

"My dear Sir:

"Under separate cover I am today sending you a copy of a 52-page booklet, 'Achieving a Balanced Agriculture.' This is issued by the Department of Agriculture, and explains with considerable detail the farm program of the Roosevelt Administration. It is written from an impartial standpoint, and should serve to answer some of the Administration's critics.

"I think you should know that each member of Congress is entitled to receive at least 100 copies of this booklet for distribution in his district. This apportionment is made strictly on a nonpartisan basis so that your Republican opponent has, or may obtain, his copies.

"It might be interesting for you or your friends to ascertain whether he plans to distribute these booklets, and, if so, whether before or after the election.

"With best wishes for your success in November."

Letters Signed by Hayden.

The letters were signed by Charles S. Hayden, executive secretary of the Democratic National Committee.

Members of the committee staff said they thought the letters "sufficiently explicit."

After outlining in detail, and illustrating with graphs, what the AAA claims it is accomplishing in the farm adjustment program, the pamphlet concludes with the promise.

"There must be a balance between the production of the farmers' fields and the consumption of their product.

"There must be balance between the income of the farmers and the income of their neighbors in the cities and towns.

"Insofar as we are successful in achieving and maintaining such a balance, we shall insure a fair share of our National income to the producers of the farm commodities on which our basic National welfare to a large extent depends."

Adm. Standley To Assist Davis At Naval Talk

Selection Taken to Mean That President Opposes Change in Ratio.

After a two and a half hour conference at the White House yesterday afternoon between President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of Naval Operations, the White House announced that Admiral Standley would accompany Mr. Davis to the London naval conversations opening October 20. They will sail on the United States Liner Manhattan October 10.

Admiral Standley's selection confirmed previous indications that the American attitude would continue to favor proportionate all-around reductions, but would be against any change in existing naval ratios. The admiral represents the "big Navy" group which strenuously opposes anything but proportionate reductions, and is particularly against concessions such as the Japanese apparently mean to demand.

Opinion is that the President hardly would have chosen Admiral Standley to go to the preliminary meeting in London unless he was in accord with the admiral's views, nor would Admiral Standley have accepted the assignment if it involved any material sacrifice of those views. Accordingly, the obvious assumption is that Mr. Roosevelt will strongly back up the Navy.

From Secretary Swanson's recent statements it is clear that the Navy will object to conceding a higher naval ratio to Japan than the present 5-5-3 agreement. The British have advanced once more their proposal to reduce the maximum tonnage of big battleships from 35,000 to 25,000, and Mr. Roosevelt has already indorsed the Navy's stand against the reduction, though the Navy might agree to a figure somewhat under 35,000 tons.

The Navy might also accede to 14-inch guns, with which most of the American battleships are now equipped, instead of the 16-inch maximum. But the Navy view is adamant against reducing existing strength to 8-inch gun cruisers.

Naval authorities expect that Japan in presenting an alternative for the Washington and London naval treaties, which she has indicated she will denounce, will propose elimination of so-called offensive weapons, involving airplane carriers and bombers. If this proves to be the case, the Navy probably will counter with a proposal to abolish submarines. And this, in turn, would deadlock that issue, for the Japanese rely heavily upon the undersea ships. Since they are the most effective instruments for preying upon merchant fleets, they are considered offensive weapons by naval authorities in this country.

The outlook for the resumed London talks, postponed from a deadlock last June, remains as bleak as ever. Mr. Davis remarked after an earlier talk with Mr. Roosevelt that there was "much fishing to be done" in the troubled waters. There is no discoverable optimism anywhere that the London talks will make possible resumption of a conference giving any hope of extending let alone improving upon, either the London or Washington treaties.

Norfolk Mayor Urges Sales Tax for Needy

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Pointing to the acute need for additional money for relief this winter, Mayor Taylor today advocated speedy imposition of a sales tax or a city stamp tax on liquor sold by the State in its A. B. C. dispensaries.

This latter expedient, he said, would not help the rural communities where liquor is not sold, "but the Governor has stated that the relief needs in the rural sections are less urgent than in the cities."

"We can, if we choose," writes Wallace, "look backward with longing to the old kind of liberty, which was more often license for the few and economic serfdom for the many. # Williams-Hillman Clash Bared, Heralding NRA Board Battle

Pair Fought Over Wages Before President Gave Them New Jobs.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Sharp differences of opinion between Clay Williams, chairman of the new NRA administrative board, and Sidney Hillman, a labor member, recently marked a code hearing, it was learned yesterday.

Disclosure of the conflicting viewpoints expressed by the two board members prior to their appointment was believed, generally, to presage a bitter fight in the governing agency over minimum wage provisions of codes, particularly such clauses in the tobacco manufacturing pact, which inspired the debate between Williams and Hillman, and which ultimately will be passed on by the board.

President Roosevelt last week named Williams and Hillman on the five-man administrative board. The tobacco hearing was held August 21. The transcript of the proceedings, which came to light yesterday for the first time, contained the following colloquy between Williams, at that time spokesman for the industry, and Hillman, who represented the Labor Advisory Board:

Hillman: Do you think that 40 cents an hour is a decent wage?

Williams: I think it is a very decent wage indeed for a great deal of labor involved in a tobacco factory. I think it would be an excessive wage for some of it.

Argue on Cost Rise.

Other exchanges between the pair dealt with possible increases in costs to the consumer and the question of profits. The observations included:

Hillman—"Suppose the cost of labor should be doubled by the code. How would that affect the consumer?"

Williams—"Not very substantially."

Hillman—"Would it affect it at all?"

Williams—"You mean would it result in an immediate change in price?"

Hillman—"Would it result in an increased price to the consumer?"

Williams—"I should assume that it would not in itself result in an increased price to the consumer, but I would say in that connection that accumulation of additional items of cost from time to time has actually amounted to a situation that does result in an increased price to the consumer." * * *

Hillman—"You would consider that if we had a scale of less than 40 cents an hour for labor we would have purchasing power in this country?"

Williams—"You have purchasing power at scales of less than that."

Hillman—"How could you substantiate that?"

Williams—"If you are speaking of the abstract proposition that the higher the wage scale the higher the purchasing power I am, I think, with you."

Hillman — "Purchasing power comes from wages paid to workers."

Williams—"Except that wages paid to workers may show an increased cost of goods generally which might reduce purchasing power."

Meanwhile, the administrative board, in one of its first rulings, gave subdivisional and divisional bituminous coal code authorities opportunity to protest before price changes by another subdivisional code authority shall become effective.

The board reserved for itself final authority in cases of disputes between the divisional groups over prices. In the past the regional code authorities functioned separately and were permitted to pass on such issues independently.

Stolen D. C. Yacht Found in Florida

Man and Woman Seized by Coast Guard.

The auxiliary sloop Silver Cloud, stolen August 20 from the dock of the Corinthian Yacht Club, was recovered yesterday by the United States Coast Guard off Fernandina, Fla., according to an Associated Press report. A man and a woman were arrested.

The boat, owned by Percy E. Budlong, official Senate reporter, was taken by a man who persuaded the boat club watchman he was a friend of the owner. Coast Guard headquarters was unable to furnish the names of the persons taken into custody.

The cutter Yamacraw found the 22-foot vessel rolling in a heavy sea, according to the Associated Press. Budlong has been in Florida for several days in an attempt to find his boat.

British Steamer With 26 Aboard Is Still Missing

Last Message of Freighter Millpool 'Unreadable,' Searchers Report.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The British freighter Millpool, crippled by a storm 700 miles off the coast of Labrador, was still missing tonight, with a crew of 26.

Two ships that raced to her rescue gave up the search after finding no trace of her, but a third ship was still searching.

The last distress message from the Millpool was described in a wireless from another ship as "unreadable."

A second British freighter, the Ainderby, was also battered by the storm. Her bridge was carried away and she was unable to heave to, but she was afloat with two vessels standing by.

The British steamer Ascania and the Canadian freighter Beaverhill abandoned the search for the Millpool after crisscrossing the position given in the crippled freighter's last faint radio signals. A wireless message intercepted by Mackay Radio at 1:15 p. m. read:

"Searched over wide area but no sign, steamer Millpool, now proceeding. Steamer Beaverhill also covered wide area without results and proceeding. Steamer Beaverford still searching.

The Cunard Steamship Co. later received a message from the Ascania, relayed by a radio station at Rockland, Me. The captain said he was proceeding to England.

A vessel of 4,218 tons, the Millpool was on her way from Danzig to Montreal with a cargo of grain. Her home port was West Hartlepool, England.

In earlier distress messages, Capt. Arthur Newton said that three of his crew had been injured and that his ship was being driven helplessly before the gale.

The Ainderby, bound for Montreal with a cargo of Welsh coal, was apparently outlasting the storm with the British liner Antonia and the British freighter Trematon ready to take off her crew if it became necessary. She was about 580 miles off the Labrador Coast.

six deputies. Near the plant the office workers' cars were met with a barrage of bricks, torn from a pavement, and stones.

Deputies said a crowd of 500 rushed the cars. Police said only one shot was fired, then the deputies discharged tear gas guns. Quirk, standing about 15 feet from the street intersection where the cars were attacked, fell to the pavement.

Previously a crowd of several thousand surrounded two buses carrying workers from the mill. Stones and bricks were hurled, injuring several persons in the vehicles. The crowd followed the buses for several squares, badly damaging them, before State and Brideport police succeeded in dispersing the men and women by using tear gas.

Georgia Guard Seizes Foundry Pickets

Rome, Ga., Oct. 3 (AP).—The military arms of Georgia crashed down today on pickets who have kept Rome's foundries closed since July 21, routing the strikers and clearing a path for resumption of operations.

Led by Adjt. Gen. Lindley Camp and Col. L. C. Pope, commander of the 121st Infantry, five companies of National Guardsmen invaded this city at daybreak and, armed with martial law authority, broke the strike that has held the stove plants helpless for months.

The 3-mile-long caravan of 500 guardsmen descended first on the Rome Stove & Range Co. A group of pickets quickly was herded across the street under the threat of bayonets and machine guns as the troops scattered to other plants about the city.

After holding the strikers for some time, Gen. Camp permitted them to leave for their homes. There was no disorder as the strikers and troops exchanged good-natured banter.

"We are going to treat these boys right and we want to be treated right by them," Gus Latham, chairman of the strike committee, said as he herded into line with the rest of the strikers.

"We asked for more money and didn't get it and the International Moulders Union, the mounters and common labor unions ordered us out. We intend to stand up for our rights."

Gen. Camp told the strikers that only three pickets would be allowed at the entrance of each mill under martial law orders.

Tokyo (Thursday), Oct. 4 (AP).—A navy spokesman commented today that the United States was "unable properly to handle even two dirigibles," to say nothing of sending a fleet of 50 to Japan, as suggested in Washington by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell. "There is no reason for Japan to be alarmed."

An army spokesman previously had said Japan declined to take Gen. Mitchell seriously, but nevertheless utilized the retired officer's suggestion as a means of emphasizing Japan's need for additional defensive measures.

Hawaiian Sugar Trade in Peril, Court Is Told

$9,000,000 Loss Is Faced if Control Act Stands, Says Witness.

Hawaiian sugar producers stand to lose $9,000,000 if the provisions of the Jones-Costigan sugar control act are permitted to stand, Richard A. Cooke, one of Hawaii's leading producers, testified in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

Cooke, a director of 17 of the 37 companies that are seeking to have the act declared unconstitutional, estimated the 916,000 tons of sugar which the islands are now permitted to produce and send into the United States would be from 140,000 to 150,000 tons short of the maximum capacity.

His testimony came during trial of a suit, in which the sugar producers are seeking an injunction to stop Secretary of Agriculture Wallace from enforcing the quotas he has established under the authority of the Jones-Costigan act.

Earlier in the day, the sugar interests woh a victory when Justice Jennings Bailey declined to dismiss the suit.

Wallace Is Barred.

At the same time, Justice Bailey indicated he would not permit Secretary Wallace to take the stand and tell the reasons that led him to the quota figures. He held that the "mental processes" by which the Secretary decided to permit Hawaii only 916,000 tons were beyond the control of the petitioners.

In his testimony Tuesday, Mr. Wallace had indicated he thought it would not be "in the public interest" to expose the records upon which the quotas were supported. He said "international relationships" would be touched upon, and he directly mentioned Cuba in this respect. Justice Bailey's ruling yesterday removed Wallace from the picture.

Cooke drew a dismal picture of the plight of the islands. He pointed out that because of the prevalence of a high wage scale in the islands and the high quality of the sugar grown there, the producers found it impossible to compete with other countries in the world market.

Tariff Only Salvation.

He said that but for the high tariff which forced other nations to pay a high premium on sugar shipped to the United States, the Hawaiian situation would be desperate. Sugar grown on the islands is rated as "96-degree" in the finished products, he said, while competing countries produced, on an average, sugar rating only a 92-degree mark.

Before Cooke took the stand, John Waterhouse, president of the Hawaiian Sugar Producers Association, had given a word picture of the effect the sugar industry has on Hawaiian prosperity. He said that the quota not only sharply curtailed the amount of export sugar, but, if prolonged throughout the years, would increase yearly because of increasing efficiency in growing the cane.

Mussolini Seeks To Rally Fascists

Rome, Oct. 3 (AP).—Premier Mussolini left the capital tonight to address his Fascists at several cities in northern Italy. Political observers regarded the leader's move as of considerable internal political significance.

He will be in Milan tomorrow and Friday for conferences. Saturday he will deliver an address described in advance here as striking, and arrangements have been made to accommodate 250,000 persons in the square before Milan's cathedral.

Sunday he will go to Cremona for another address and thereafter will speak in the smaller northern industrial cities.

Observers say the tour means that Il Duce, warned by the recent disaffection of some northern leaders such as former Undersecretary of Interior Leandro Arpinati (now serving five years on the Ipari Prison island), intends to keep in frequent contact with these chieftains.

to decline the scholarship, and President Conant immediately informed Hanfstaengl of the action. His letter said, in part:

"At a meeting of the president and fellows of Harvard College, held today, your offer of a traveling scholarship, to be known as the Dr. Hanfstaengl scholarship, was considered. I am authorized to say that, although the corporation appreciates your generosity as a Harvard alumnus, they have voted to decline your gift. We are unwilling to accept a gift from one who has been so closely associated with the leadership of a political party which has inflicted damage on the universities of Germany through measures which have struck at principles we believe to be fundamental to universities throughout the world."

In offering the scholarship, Hanfstaengle had expressed the hope that he could renew the gift in future years. Members of the Harvard Corporation which rejected it are President Conant; Thomas Nelson Perkins, of Boston; Charles Pelham Curtis, jr., of Boston; Roger Irving Lee, of Boston, and Grenville Clark, of New York; Fellows, of Harvard College, and Henry Lee Shattuck, of Boston, college treasurer.

U. S. Is Balked In Trying Sale Of Cotton Pool

Firms Reported to Hold Certificates Until Price Rises.

New Orleans, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The Government failed today in an attempt to sell its 1,950,000-bale cotton pool.

Holders of cotton pool certificates refused to offer them for sale. These certificates were given to farmers who participated in the 1933 plow-up campaign. It was rumored that large spot-cotton firms had bought many of the certificates from farmers and were determined to let the Government carry the cotton for them until the market rises.

Oscar Johnston, manager of the Government's pool, announced tonight that "pool cotton is definitely off the market until the price rises."

When bids were opened here today, there were 124 offers to buy an aggregate of 813,268 bales, Johnston said.

"This evidenced that there is a demand for cotton. However, as was expected, we received practically no offers to sell pool participation trust certificates, so we are relieved of the necessity of selling any appreciable quantity of cotton at this time."

He said not more than 100,000 bales would be sold to today's bidders and it was possible no cotton at all would be sold now.

The Government cotton was accumulated from the crops of 1930, 1931 and 1932. Some was acquired by the old Farm Board, some by the Stabilization Corporation, some from various cooperatives which were financed by the Farm Board, and some was taken over by former Secretary of Agriculture Hyde in Federal seed and crop reduction loan programs.

Vote in South On Cotton Plan Is Abandoned

Fear Prevails Farmers Would Be Unable to Express Views.

(Associated Press.)

Fear that white and colored tenant farmers might not have ample opportunity to express their views has led AAA officials to set aside a plan for a referendum among cotton growers on the form of next year's voluntary adjustment program.

Only a few days ago enthusiasm for the referendum idea—now being tried out on the corn and hog phases — had reached the point where a vote on the voluntary cotton program seemed assured.

Now, the consensus is to confine Southern voting to the Bankhead compulsory cotton bill, since the referendum to see whether it should be continued for another year is called for by the act itself.

Several questions, apparently not taken into consideration when the suggestion was first broached, caused the coolness toward the proposed referendum to see how many acres Southern farmers want to plant next year.

Not the least of these is who should vote if a ballot is held. In the case of corn and hogs the balloting is under the auspices of the county control committee.

Should this procedure be followed in the South, however, it is said that landowners might dominate the voting. Some officials feel that few Negro farmers would be asked to participate and that some white tenants might also be excluded. Consequently, the charge might be made that the vote represented only the sentiment of landlords.

The Southern tenant problem, involving both Negro and white, has caused the AAA trouble since the first cotton reduction program in 1933. Complaints that the landowners, in many cases, got more than their share of benefit payments, and assertions that tenants have been driven off the land through acreage reduction have caused AAA investigations.

The reports ensuing have said in effect that there was foundation for a comparatively few protests, but some officials are known to feel that the inquiries only skimmed the surface.

The plan for a farmers' referendum was devised to answer charges of bureaucracy and to bolster agricultural support for whatever programs finally were adopted by letting the growers themselves decide.

French Government Boosts Apple Quota

Paris (Thursday), Oct. 4 (AP).—A substantial increase in the American quota on apples and pears for the last three months of 1934 was granted today by the French government.

An American quota of 5,828 tons as its share of the global quota for the quarter, as compared with 3,780 tons for the same period of 1933, was announced. Importers said the increase was awarded in recognition of America's generous treatment of French wines since the repeal of prohibition.

Baltimore Host To Methodists In Conference

Conference to Be Followed by Celebration of 3 Churches.

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (AP).—The 150th annual session of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will open here, at the cradle of American Methodism, tomorrow night.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, presiding officer of the conference, will not be in the chair when the meeting opens at the Alpheus W. Wilson Memorial Church. He sent word today that he was confined to his home in Charlotte, N. C., by a minor throat illness, but probably would arrive before the conference closes next Tuesday.

Bishop Paul D. Kern, of Greensboro, N. C., will preside in Bishop Mouzon's absence.

A number of the 300 ministers and 108 lay delegates of the conference already had arrived here today. Tonight the presiding elders had a closed discussion of matters which will be brought before the conference at the first business session Friday. Tomorrow night the Rev. J. J. Rives, of Washington, will preach the opening sermon.

One of the most important questions expected to be discussed at the conference will be the move, launched by the "status of women committee" of the Women's Missionary Council, to seat more women on the various conference boards during the next four years. At present there are three women on the board of 158.

Immediately after the close of the Baltimore conference, the sesquicentennial celebration of the foundation of American Methodism will be held in Baltimore, where the first conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1784. The three major divisions of American Methodism—the Methodist Episcopal, the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Episcopal South—will take part.

The assembly is expected to give new impetus to the movement to reunite the three churches. It will be the first joint assembly since the Methodist Protestants, after a disagreement over lay authority, broke away in 1828 and the Southern Methodists, after a disagreement over slavery, left in 1845.

Dawsonville Women To Give Benefit Show

The Woman's Club of Dawsonville, Md., will present a benefit show in the Poolesville High School auditorium tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Brooke Johns will act as master of ceremonies. Others on the program are Jimmy Mullins, Henry Haviland, Dement Bonifant, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Randall and Boyer and Kramer.

Iowa Voters Favor Corn-Hog Program

Early Returns Show 2-to-1 Margin for Continuance.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 3 (AP).—Early returns on the Iowa corn-hog poll, although meager, indicated tonight a big majority of contract signers favor continuance of the corn-hog program next year.

Incomplete results obtained today from 21 townships in eight counties showed a total of 1,237 in favor of a program next year, 500 against.

Both signers and nonsigners were represented in the balloting, with contract signers voting about three to one in favor of another program and nonsigners about two to one against.

The corn-hog contract was signed by 176,000 Iowa farmers. The poll will continue until October 13, when results will be compiled and sent to the AAA.

Barbers on Strike For Higher Prices

Walk Out in 17 Shops in Nebraska City.

Scotts Bluff, Nebr., Oct. 3 (AP).—One journeyman and several "boss barbers" attended today to the tonsorial needs of citizens of this western Nebraska city.

The remainder of the workmen in 17 shops declined to report for duty unless the shops would agree on prices of 40 cents for haircuts and 25 cents for shaves in the principal business sections and 35 and 20 cents in the outlying shops.

The present price maximum is 25 cents for a haircut, but there have been times when shops offered them three for a quarter.

With success attending the strike call, union officials warned striking barbers to stay out and asserted that the union men will remain idle until their demands are granted.

However, a meeting between union representatives and shop proprietors was arranged.

Edwards Told Of Killing Girl, Police Testify

Jury Hears Confession Allegedly Made in Lake Tragedy.

triangle. The district attorney said Judge W. A. Valente would rule tomorrow whether the letters would be admitted in evidence.

Introduction of Edwards' alleged statements that he struck his former sweetheart with a blackjack followed testimony of two physicians that Freda had been killed by a blow on the head.

District Attorney Thomas H. Lewis, displaying a blackjack, asked Dr. Thomas Wener, who conducted the postmortem examination:

"Could the wound in the head have been caused by an instrument such as this?"

"Yes."

The blackjack held by the prosecutor is the one the Commonwealth claims Edwards used to kill his neighborhood sweetheart of other days so he could wed a music teacher, Miss Margaret Crain.

Another physician, Dr. H. A. Brown, who examined Freda's body after it was dragged in from the lake, corroborated this theory to her death and added:

"I believe the death was caused by a blow that would fell an ox."

Back went the evidence of the Commonwealth to the night of June 30—the last night Freda left her home with Edwards. They went to Harveys Lake to swim, even though it was raining and the lightning was intense.

Sleuth Tells of Arrest.

County Detective Richard Powell, a neighbor of the Edwards and McKechnie families in this mining countryside, said he ordered the arrest of Edwards after talking the next day with Freda McKechnie's father, George, a mine "boss."

When he first questioned Edwards, Powell said, the surveyor told him of letting Freda out of his automobile after driving around.

Later, Powell testified, Edwards related this story:

"We drove to the lake. I tried to get into the bathhouse, but it was locked. We changed to our bathing suits. We went into the water. We swam and waded out to a boat. I took a notion to dive. I did. When I came up my hand struck her under the chin. * * * Freda said she was getting cold. I saw Freda's bathing cap disappear. I could not find her. As I drove away I realized I had Freda's clothes and I drove back and put them under a tree."

Repeatedly Prosecutor Lewis asked if force had been used to obtain statements from Edwards. The various police witnesses said "No."

The next day, Powell related, Edwards was taken in a boat across Harvey's Lake.

"Then," Powell testified, "Edwards told a different account. He said Freda fell in the boat and he was afraid she was dead." Edwards said: "I got out my blackjack and let her have it. Then I got her by the belt and pulled her out to deeper water."

All the while, Edwards sat at his counsel table, his hands clasped, his face emotionless. The several hundred who elbowed their way to seats in the small courtroom followed the recital of the statements closely, leaning forward in their seats.

As the long line of witnesses filed to the stand, Edwards was confronted by the father of the girl he is accused of murdering—the white-haired, sturdy mine "boss."

McKechine said Edwards had come to his house the day after his daughter left home for the last time. He was there, the father said, when some one telephoned that Freda's body had been found in the lake.

Constance Bennett Extolls Mrs. Vanderbilt as Mother

Film Player Brands Nurse Making Charges of Scandal as Liar.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Constance Bennett came to the aid of her close friend, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, on her arrival from Europe today and said:

"If all mothers were as good as she, it would be a good thing for America."

The actress was told that her name and that of an Argentine friend were linked in one of the disclosures made against the widow of Reginald Vanderbilt—who is seeking to regain custody of her daughter, 10-year-old Gloria.

"That's libel," Miss Bennett said. "Why, I can't believe it."

Turning to the statements of little Gloria's nurse, Emma Sullivan Keislich, that Mrs. Vanderbilt was unfit to have custody of the girl-heiress, Miss Bennett said:

"It is disgraceful. I hope all of Mrs. Vanderbilt's friends rally to show that nurse up as the liar she is. It's ridiculous to say such obvious lies."

With Miss Bennett was her husband, the Marquis de la Falaise.

When the actress discussed the nurse's charges of misconduct between Mrs. Vanderbilt and Prince Hohenlohe, in Paris, Miss Bennett said:

"How could such behavior as that be true when Mrs. Vanderbilt lived with her baby and her mother? Prince Hohenlohe was her fiance at the time the nurse describes. His mother, too, often came to the house with him.

"Everyone Mrs. Vanderbilt associated with was also a friend of mine—all respectable people. Furthermore, Mrs. Vanderbilt does not drink anything but sherry, and tea every afternoon in the English fashion."

which were the basis of accusations in testimony against her sister.

The adjournment until Friday was announced by Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew at the outset of today's session. Carew had cleared the courtroom of spectators and newspapermen yesterday after a French maid, Maria Caillot, told of an incident at Cannes involving Mrs. Vanderbilt and Lady Milford Haven.

Lady Milford Haven is a cousin by marriage of the British royal family. She is related in her own right to the czars of old Russia.

In Paris the marchioness voiced strong indignation at the trend of the hearing and said of the statements of the French maid:

"They are monstrous."

Members of the Whitney legal staff said they would call Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, grandmother of little Gloria who has joined forces with Mrs. Whitney against her own daughter, as their first witness Friday.

Prince Ready to Sail If Gloria Needs Him

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Berlin, Oct. 3.—Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe-Langenburg plans to hurry to the United States, if Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt needs him, to defend her name against the attacks upon her character in which his own has figured.

The prince, once engaged to marry Reggie Vanderbilt's widow, said he would appear, if he is required, to refute stories of wild Paris parties in which he is alleged to have participated.

He said he wanted to marry Mrs. Vanderbilt, but she broke off their engagement because of her love for her daughter, Gloria, whose custody is being sought in a New York court action. The prince said:

"My relations with Mrs. Vanderbilt were these: We were engaged to be married for more than two years. On the wish of Mrs. Vanderbilt the engagement never was made public. Consequently, my friendship for her, and the fact that I was frequently with her at her homes in Biarritz and Paris, is easily explained.

"As a matter of fact she was here recently, on a visit to me and my family. As far as the allegations of that nurse are concerned, they are too ludicrous to require comment.

"The nurse's testimony regarding Gloria's treatment by her mother is one falsehood from beginning to end."

The prince said Mrs. Vanderbilt had hesitated at the prospect of bringing Gloria to Europe to be brought up in a continental atmosphere. He had to stay in Germany to look after the family estates, he said, and accordingly he and Mrs. Vanderbilt reached an impasse.

Cleveland Bank President Held Guilty of Fraud

J. A. House Convicted of Misapplying Funds of Guardian Trust.

Cleveland, Oct. 3 (AP).—J. Arthur House, who rose from teller to president of the Guardian Trust Co., one of Cleveland's largest banks, today was convicted of misapplication of the bank's funds and making false entries in its books.

A Federal court jury of seven women and five men, all residents of northeastern Ohio, debated only 3 hours and 15 minutes before finding him guilty on all 26 counts.

Counsel for the banker, who saw the Guardian Trust collapse along with the Union Trust Co. here in the banking holiday of March, 1933, moved immediately for a new trial.

Judge Samuel H. West said he would hear the motion Saturday. If it is denied, House may be sentenced to five years' imprisonment and fined $5,000 on each count.

House was indicted and tried jointly with Harry C. Robinson and William R. Green, former Guardian vice president, but Robinson and Green were freed by a directed verdict of acquittal ordered yesterday by Judge West after all the testimony in the trial had been heard.

The indictment was based on the purchase of Guardian Bank stock to bolster a falling market. The Government charged that House misapplied $58,000 from an employes' pension fund in buying the stock.

Federal Jury Indicts Three in Louisiana

New Orleans, La., Oct. 3 (U.P.). A Federal grand jury which has been investigating income tax returns of Louisiana political figures today returned indictments against three officials of the Mississippi Valley Co., Inc., of Baton Rouge, La., which sold supplies to the State highway commission.

Those indicted were Harry B. Nelson, John P. Nelson and Willis W. Nelson, three brothers, who are listed as owning all the company's stock except one share. They were charged with trying to evade income taxes.

Board Upholds Union's Claims

Clarifies Collective Bargain Policy in Rochester Plant Decision.

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday clarified its policy beyond that set forth in the celebrated Houde Engineering Corporation case.

Ruling on a complaint involving the National Aniline & Chemical Co., of Buffalo, the board held that the collective bargaining requirement in section 7 (a) of the National recovery act is not complied with until an agreement between the employer is executed.

The board ruled that it is not sufficient for an employer merely to receive the representatives of his employes, discuss terms of employment with them, and act upon such of the demands put forth as are satisfactory to him.

The Labor Board stated that a collective agreement need not be reduced to writing, as the union contended, but held that such a practice is advisable where a proposed agreement includes detailed provisions covering wages, hours and a variety of working conditions.

The board ruled that the complaint of the Allied Chemical Workers in the Aniline case charging discrimination against members of the union was not adequately supported by the evidence.

Weirton Plant Awed Workers, Witnesses Say

Employes Feared for Jobs if Seen at Union's Meetings, Charge.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 3 (AP).—A procession of witnesses testified in United States District Court today to support the Government's contention in its injunction suit against the Weirton Steel Co. that employes were "afraid" to attend union meetings and had to pay dues secretly lest they lose their jobs.

Unhurried by Judge John P. Nields, Federal attorneys at the end of the second day had questioned fewer than 10 of the 60 witnesses they contemplate placing on the stand. The Government seeks to obtain a permanent injunction restraining the Weirton company from interfering with the organization and balloting of its employes for collective bargaining representatives.

The defense has not yet been heard.

Mrs. Elizabeth Entinger, wife of a company employe, testified some of the workers came to her "light lunch and beer" place in Weirton and paid her their dues in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. They did this, she said, because "the men are afraid to go to the hall there, especially among the foreign class of people, for fear of their bosses."

She testified "some of them have nerve enough to come in the front way and others went through the rear."

Mrs. Entinger turned the payments over to the lodge secretaries, she said. Although she asserted at least 150 paid dues to her, "not more than a dozen" actually told her they were afraid to go to the meeting hall.

George Moore, dismised from the Weirton employ two weeks after the strike last fall, testified to the presence of "officers or bosses of the company" near the lodge hall "every meeting night."

The Government questioned other witnesses similarly to support its complaints that the employe representation plan, or company union, is inadequate, and that Weirton workers who wanted the Amalgamated as their bargaining agency were restrained from supporting it because of company intimidation.

J. P. Curley Gets U. S. County Post

James P. Curley, former Mayor of Laurel, has been appointed United States Conciliation Commissioner for Prince Georges County, it was announced yesterday.

An attorney with offices in both Laurel and Baltimore, Mr. Curley will act as referee in bankruptcy for the county. The appointment was made by United States Circuit Court Judge William T. Coleman, of Baltimore.

Judge Coleman made the appointment under the last June amendment of the National bankruptcy act, which created the local conciliatory positions.

Mr. Curley, a Republican, is a political leader both in the county and State. In addition to his law practice, he is editor of the Laurel Leader, a weekly newspaper, and president of the local library association.

Plane Crash Is Fatal To Granger, Race Pilot

Santa Monica, Calif., Oct. 3 (AP).—James E. Granger, racing pilot, died at a hospital here today of injuries suffered last night when his monoplane nosed over as he was taking off from Clover Field. Physicians attributed death to a skull fracture.

Granger had planned to compete in the forthcoming London-to-Melbourne Air Derby. He was associated in an aviation school here with Ruth Elder, transatlantic aviatrix.

White House Social Functions Confined to State Dining Room

Crowded Condition to Be Relieved With New Executive Wing.

Because of "the difficulty of getting upstairs," all social activities of the White House for the next three months will be confined to the state dining room. The President and his staff are occupying all the other state apartments on the first floor for executive offices until the new executive wing is finished.

Contrary to the usual custom, the first week in October brought no announcement from the White House of the schedule of state dinners and receptions for the season.

Mrs. Roosevelt explained at her press conferenece yesterday that it may be possible to give the dinner for the members of the Cabinet in December if the building plans at the White House progress enough.

Otherwise all the state functions will be held after the first of the year until the beginning of Lent. This will mean that instead of one state function at the White House each week there will have to be two or perhaps three, in order to get in the usual amount of formal entertaining before Ash Wednesday.

Mrs. Roosevelt held her press conference in the state dining room yesterday, instead of in the room at the end of the corridor on the second floor, as has been her custom.

Methodists Meet To Assign Pastors

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—The 111th Holston Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, embracing pastorates in Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee, held its first session tonight, with Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, Ga., presiding.

Business sessions start tomorrow, to continue through Sunday, when appointments of pastors will be made. There are 240 pastors in the Holston Conference and more than 200 arrived for the meeting.

Bishop Ainsworth, who arrived Monday, has been holding preliminary conferences with his cabinet of nine presiding elders.

Group Urges Roosevelt To Fight Traffic Toll

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 3 (AP).—A resolution urging the President to call a conference of Governors to consider the rising toll of traffic accidents was adopted by the National Safety Council at its annual banquet tonight.

The resolution asserted that an all-time "high" of 35,000 deaths, more than 1,000,000 injuries, and $2,000,000,000 in property damage this year is indicated. Experience of many cities and States has shown these losses can be reduced at least 50 per cent "by legislative, administrative, engineering and educational measures of proven value," the council held.

4 of Family Named As Baby's Slayers

Montrose, Colo., Oct. 3 (AP).—Four members of the R. D. Garretson family, of the Maple Grove District, were charged with murder today after Sheriff A. M. McAnally said he found the mother and two daughters had kept a baby hidden for a week in a trunk before it died.

The sheriff said the baby was the daughter of Frankie Garretson, 15 years old, and unwed. He said he believed the baby had been hidden in the trunk to keep the father, a farmer, from knowing it was born.

Formal charges of murder were filed by the sheriff against Mr. and Mrs. Garretson and their daughters, the other of whom is 19.

President Won't Name Successor to Douglas

President Roosevelt said yesterday that he has no immediate intention of appointing a permanent successor to Lewis W. Douglas, who recently resigned as budget director.

Confirming reports published in yesterday's Post, the President indicated that he would not fill the office until the groundwork had been laid for the 1936 budget, now in its preliminary stages.

The President said that affairs of the Budget Bureau were proceeding satisfactorily under the acting director, D. W. Bell, and that he had not even considered the matter of a successor.

silence the news that the United Textile Workers had offered in a letter to President Roosevelt to enter into a six months' truce with capital "in the hope that it may be extended toward permanent industrial peace."

Padway also asserted that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, resigned NRA administrator, "betrayed labor" by putting his signature to an interpretation of the NRA giving employers the right to bargain with individual groups.

A call for a "more-work program rather than a share-the-poverty program" was sounded on the convention floor by Senator James J. Davis, Pennsylvania Republican, a former Secretary of Labor.

Three squads of the police crime prevention detail guarded the convention hall today. It was said they were posted to prevent any possibility of agitators disturbing the sessions. A man who had been passing out handbills headed "Communist and Trade Unions" was taken into custody.

Government agencies were criticized by two sources.

A group of delegates introduced a resolution condemning the National Labor Relations Board for its "illegal and illogical" attitude on company unions.

Padway assailed Attorney General Homer Cummings for alleged failure to proceed against alleged violators of the NRA.

Other resolutions introduced proposed the condemnation of Green for his attitude on the recent San Francisco general strike, favored general strikes in sympathy with craft strikes where standards of living are involved, and advocated the withdrawal of all federation officials from NRA boards.

A resolution proposing that Kohler & Co., of Kohler, Wis., scene of a recent strike, be branded unfair to labor also was offered. The resolutions are to be acted upon next week.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, declared on his arrival today the federation's executive council must be enlarged "to include more brains" and further organization of labor must be turned to industrial unionization.

A resolution seeking "a complete investigation by the proper Governmental agency" into the profit-sharing plan of the Procter & Gamble Co. was introduced by J. C. Coulter, of the Long Beach, Calif., Central Labor Council.

Mill Plan Held To Grant Right Of Bargaining

Steel Workers Still Have Strike Privilege, Says Chairman.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 3 (AP).—Striking back at charges by union members, Earl W. Jenkins, chairman of the Employes' Representation Plan at three steel mills in the Youngstown, Ohio, industrial district, told the Steel Labor Board today the system gives the workers the authority to bargain colectively with their employers.

"There is nothing in the plan to deprive the men of the privilege of striking," Jenkins replied to an allegation that under the representation plan the workers' "utmost authority is to discuss enumerated problems with the management."

His testimony was given after Charlton Ogburn, attorney for the Amlagamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, charged the Carnegie Steel Co. was evading provisions of section 7 (a) of NRA in operation of the employe representation plan.

Argue Over Petition.

The question of collective bargaining was thrust on the board in tense argument upon the petition of the Amalgamated for a Government-supervised election among workers of the Carnegie Steel Co.'s plant at McDonald, Ohio, near Youngstown.

The power of the board was challenged by R. E. Desvernine, counsel for the company, in the same manner as at yesterday's hearing on a similar petition by union members at the company's plant in Duquesne, Pa.

"Are you going to test the constitutionality of the board?" Desvernine was asked by Admiral Henry A. Wiley, a member.

"I do not know," he replied. "We hope not."

Desvernine said the company was anxious to cooperate with the board and "bring out the facts."

"If within the confines of the Constitution this board is merely a ghost flying about in thin air, the sooner we find out the better," interjected Chairman Walter P. Stacy.

Workers On Stand.

Desvernine remarked it was doubtful if the steel industry had accepted as constitutional the act creating the board.

Steel workers paraded on the witness stand, some favoring a new election to choose collective bargaining representatives in the Ohio plant, and others saying they were satisfied with the present representation plan.

Union members charge the plan is "company controlled."

Jenkins testified he had suggested that Attorneys Edmund L. Jones and Joseph J. Cotter, both of Washington, be retained to represent the representation plan at the hearing, with the Carnegie Co. to bear the expense. The workers pay no dues under the plan and have no funds to hire counsel.

Panel Is Drawn To Hear Kelley Ouster Action

Arlington Board Head Is Permitted to Attend Juror Selection.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

A jury panel for the impeachment trial of Lyman M. Kelley, chairman of the Arlington County Board, was drawn yesterday by John A. Petty, clerk of the Circuit Court. Kelley was present at the drawing, the first time in the history of the county a defendant was granted this privilege.

Kelley, it was revealed by Petty, requested some time ago that he be permitted to attend the drawing and the clerk communicated with Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, who has been designated by the Governor to conduct the trial. The latter asserted in a letter to Petty that there was no law by which the defendant could be excluded from the drawing.

However, the judge issued a warning that Kelley was not to be permitted to make any remark during the procedure.

Petty, fearing criticism despite the ruling, invited Commander Percy T. Wright, U. S. N., of Cherrydale, and A. L. Handy, of Barcroft, to be present. Claude O. Thomas, commissioner in chancery, also was present. Kelley wrote the name of each prospective juror as drawn on a piece of paper and left without comment, Petty said.

The panel follows: George T. Taylor, H. J. Odenthal, James B. Lockwood, J. Lawrence Manning, E. B. Crosen, T. C. Furr and E. W. Hoskins, of Clarendon; William R. Howe, of Ballston, and Martin J. Cooke, of East Falls Church.

The jury in an impeachment trial, according to Petty, consists of seven members, to be selected from the panel of nine.

The proceedings against Kelley were brought on recommendation of a special grand jury, which considered various charges presented by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas. It recommended that he be required to appear and show cause why he should not be removed from office for malfeasance, misfeasance and gross neglect of duty. No criminal prosecution is involved.

Police Radios Installed.

With the installation yesterday of radios in the police cars of Arlington County, the National Capital and its adjoining neighbors are equipped to quickly run down crimes.

Through the cooperation of the Washington Police Department broadcasting station, county police are now informed of happenings in the metropolitan area.

A 24-hour service will be maintained in the county as well as in the Capital.

Word was received last night by Commander Edgar W. Pumphrey of Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, of the death of one of its members, Joseph Hurley, at his home in San Francisco.

Hurley was an active member of the local post and saw service overseas during the World War. He will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

He leaves a widow and one son, Joseph Hurley, jr., 13.

A resolution offered by Dr. Victor Myers at the meeting of the Arlington County Civic Federation last night calling for legislation which will provide that the members of the Arlington County Board shall be elected every two years instead of four years has been referred to the committee on legislation and legal action.

Another resolution by R. E. Royall, chairman of the committee on roads and streets, was adopted, calling for immediate completion of Washington avenue from Wilson boulevard to Military road.

In an effort to avoid confusion, such as resulted at the last election for county officers, from the unusually large number of candidates for the county board, a special committee of the federation will begin a series of open meetings on Thursday night, October 11, at which all interested persons are invited to offer suggestions. The meeting will be at the courthouse. At the last election there were 52 candidates for the five-man board.

Democratic leaders of Montgomery County are expected to be present at the dance tomorrow night at Brooke Johns' Old Barn, Norbeck. The dance will be given by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Bethesda and Chevy Chase.

Yesterday for the first time in the recollection of Arlington County Court officials, a defendant was present when a jury was drawn for his trial in the circuit court.

The defendant was Lyman M. Kelley, chairman of the Arlington County Board, who is facing impeachment proceedings. The public wonders why he desired this strange reversion of custom.

Something else happened over in Arlington County yesterday.

For the benefit of baseball fans, consisting chiefly of members of the local bar and county officials, Homer Randolph Thomas drove his car up on the courthouse lawn and turned the radio on.

With the final installation of Arlington County police radios early yesterday, suburban police in all four counties were declared completely equipped with the chase 'em system.

Welfare Plans Protested by Fairfax County

Families May Become Local Charges, Say Supervisors.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., adopted a resolution yesterday officially protesting the establishment of the rehabilitation and welfare relief projects by the District of Columbia in Fairfax County, Va.

According to information the welfare department of the District of Columbia proposes to acquire land in the county which will be distributed among 500 white and 500 colored families now on relief rolls in the District. It is said that the District officials had already agreed on a tract for white families and are looking for another tract for colored families.

A committee from the Fairfax County Pomona Grange appeared before the supervisors in opposition to the project. It was stated that the type of families that would be placed in the county had not been self-supporting in the past and in the future they would become charges on the county relief.

Copies of the resolution adopted yesterday are to be sent to the District Commissioners and Senators Harry F. Byrd and Carter Glass and Representative Howard W. Smith.

A resolution indorsing the creation of a Federal park, game preserve and recreation center along Accotink Run in Lee and Mount Vernon districts of the county was adopted. Supervisor G. Wallace Carper urged that the tract of land at Great Falls, Va., also be taken over by the Federal Government as a recreation center.

Commonwealth Attorney Wilson M. Farr informed the supervisors yesterday that he was very much dissatisfied with the salary fixed by the State compensation board and was going to take the matter up with the judge of the circuit court. He declared that there was not a Commonwealth's attorney in the State that had been fairly treated. He had asked that he be paid $4,000 a year and the amount fixed by the commission was $3,600. Half is paid by the county and half by the State; the State, however, deducts 15 per cent of its portion.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County will attempt again to regulate the establishment of commercial hog farms within the county, its two previous attempts having failed through court action. A county ordinance on the subject was drafted yesterday by the board. A public hearing on the proposed ordinance will be held at the regular monthly meeting of the board in November.

The proposed ordinance includes a provision that three years after its adoption it will be unlawful to feed garbage to hogs in the county. At that time it forbids the hauling of garbage on roads in the county from one point to another within the State. After April 15 next year it will be unlawful to haul garbage originating from a point outside the State except in watertight containers so covered as to prevent any leakage or seepage or noxious odors.

The ordinance defines a commercial hog farm as any place, farm or inclosure where ten or more swine are kept for commercial purposes. To operate such a farm a permit must be obtained from the board. The application for a permit must be acompanied by a $25 inspection fee and by a map drawn to scale showing all residents and other mile of the farm. A public hearing must be held on each application. Each permit is subject to revocation on recommendation of the local health department and following an inspection by the supervisors. Violation of the proposed ordinance is classed as a misdemeanor and is punishable by a fine and imprisonment.

The town council of Fairfax, Va., has organized and the following committees appointed: Finance, Edgar Littleton, Dr. Ford Swetnam and John M. Whalen; streets and roads, O. B. Campbell, Albert R. Sherwood and James E. Nickell. Mayor Lindsay Carne and Councilman Whalen were appointed to draft new ordinances. Mayor Carne designated Dr. Swetnam as a committee to arrange with the county health unit for a sanitary survey of the town.

"I shall speak all over the States about my master Gandhi and my beloved adopted country of India," the English devotee said. "I want to speak to the American public about conditions in India as I know them myself." Mirabat carried only scanty baggage. It consisted chiefly of a khaddi cloth handbag.

Mrs. Mary Wallace Is Granted Divorce

Final decree of absolute divorce was granted Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Wallace, 26, of Silver Spring, yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, with permission to resume her maiden name of Clapham. The husband, Thomas Daniel Wallace, to whom she was married August 8, 1932, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., was charged with infidelity. The couple separated four months ago.

Walter R. Muir, of Silver Spring, filed suit for limited divorce from Mary A. Muir, of Richmond, alleging desertion. They were married January 25, 1926, in Washington, and have a child 7 years old.

Virginian Held In Bigamy Case

Believed He Was Divorced From First, Lucian Willingham Says.

Lucian Willingham, 30, of Dranesville, Va., was held for the circuit court grand juary of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday on charges of bigamy by County Trial Justice Paul E. Brown.

He was arrested last week by Deputy Sheriff Henry Magarity on a charge of nonsupport preferred by his wife. Police found that a marriage license had been issued to a man by the same name several years ago in Warrenton.

Police said Willingham married Miss Mary Ruth Owen, of The Plains, in 1921, and in 1928 married Miss Lucille Reed, of Dranesville. There are two children by the first marriage and three by the second.

Confronted by the two women, the accused admitted he had married both but said he believed he was divorced from the first wife.

Sheriff E. P. Kirby, of Fairfax, said divorce proceedings were instituted by Willingham prior to his second marriage but the case never matured.

Failing to furnish $4,000 bail, Willingham is held in the Fairfax Jail.

Arrest Causes Political Row

Fusionists in Montgomery Call It Frame-up to Discredit Member.

Russell Magruder, Rockville storekeeper, arrested Saturday at the Montgomery County Charity Horse Show on a charge of disorderly conduct, will face Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt in Montgomery County Police Court this morning at Rockville while politicians argue the merits of his case.

Fusion party leaders charge Magruder's arrest was a political frame-up to discredit one of their prominent members. State's Attorney Stedman Prescott declares it isn't so; that Magruder would have been allowed to go his way without charges had not James P. Veirs, another prominent Fusionist, insisted on charges being placed.

The arresting policeman, Robert Phillips, of Bethesda, said he didn't even know Mr. Magruder when he arrested him, and that the only reason he took him into custody was because several women nearby objected to the language used by the defendant. He has summoned the women and several other witnesses.

Magruder is at liberty on $200 bail, posted by Mrs. Veirs, who on Saturday filed suit against two Montgomery County commissioners, alleging their salaries had been paid in violation of constitutional provisions.

They were Mrs. A. B. Fast, cafeteria; Jo V. Morgan, program; Mrs. McLeod Maurice, ways and means; Leon M. Davis, band; V. T. H. Bien, building, and Nev W. Strausbaugh, publicity.

William John Cooper, former commissioner of education, now a member of the faculty of the School of Education at George Washington University, spoke on the plans for the Parent-Teacher program for 1934-1935.

Considerable discussion was precipitated by the report of Mr. Bien, chairman of the building committee, that the Western Suburban High School now under construction is unsuitable for a senior high school because it has no auditorium, and for a junior high because there is no athletic field.

Planes' Lenses To Burn Cities, Ace Forecasts

Rickenbacker Sees Ships Using Sun's Rays, Carrying Cannon.

A fantastic picture of the next war in which cities would be burned to ashes by the sun's rays was presented to the Federal Aviation Commission today by Col. Eddie Rickenbacker, war ace.

He envisioned artillery battles between giant aircraft while ground forces engaged in similar conflict.

Airplanes, he said, would carry giant lenses to great heights and focus them on the sun's rays. "The resulting heat sent to the ground will burn up cities," he asserted.

Defense Held Poor.

Commissioners listened closely while Rickenbacker talked, but made no comment. The war pilot said the United States had an inadequate air defense and no knowledge of tactics which might be used in future conflicts.

"The last war," he said, "was a 'sunshine war' as far as aerial combat was concerned, but most damage in the next war will be done during bad weather. Pilots will have to be schooled in blind flying.

Airplanes in the next war will pick up fast tanks and drop them over the enemy lines without landing. Then they'll return to their own lines for another load.

"Planes will be mounted with small cannon and artillery battles will be fought in the air just as on the ground. Entire armies will be moved in huge transport planes capable of flying at high altitudes so that they can hide from enemy ships."

For Pacific Air Lines.

Rickenbacker did not elaborate, and admitted his ideas "sounded fantastic."

He told the commission the United States should join with Japan in operation of passenger air lines across the Pacific, providing service to Hawaii, the Philippine Islands and New Zealand. Such a service, he said, would foster friendliness between the two points.

He recommended a ten-year development program with civil aviation placed under a regulatory, nonpartisan commission. Politics, he said, "already has destroyed much of our progress."

1,000-Plane Air Force Is Planned

rectly with ground troops in tactical operations, to furnish reconnaisance information, spot the targets and assist in the fire of artillery, and the fighting force.

"The general headquarters air force is the main striking element, equipped with attack, pursuit and bombardment planes. They are to be used just as you would use a slingshot—thrown at the point where they will be most damaging.

"Great Deciding Factor."

"The general headquarters force could be used as a great deciding factor in a mass combat and for rapid reinforcement at distant threatened points, such as our outposts in Panama or Hawaii. It could be used on independent missions of destruction aimed at the vital arteries of a nation, or divided up and used as necessity demanded."

MacArthur emphasized that the Nation's war plans are predicated on the assumption of defense only and that the general headquarters air force would have defense of the Nation's frontiers as its chief mission.

"The whole organization of the American Army would be different," MacArthur said, "if it were designed for offensive action."

Under the general headquarters air force plan, the 48 existing combat units will be brought up to full peace-time strength and approximately 15 new units organized.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Air Corps, who relinquishes actual command of the flying activities of the corps under the new setup, will continue to have supervision of the air schools, training of personnel and acquisition of planes.

The President made known he is considering the problem of increasing the annual earnings of all workers. He told of a conversation he had with a machinist at the time of the threatened automobile strike last winter.

He learned the worker earned $1.25 an hour, or $10 a day, but only worked 65 days a year for a total income of $650.

War Department Plans Increasing Fleet to Full Strength.

An increase in the number of planes and flying officers at Langley Field, Va., center of the new General Headquarters Air Force, is contemplated by the War Department in its plans for strengthening American military aviation, the Associated Press reported last night.

Units of the Headquarters Air Force, to be under the immediate command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of the general staff, will be the first to be brought to full peace strength when new planes are added to the Army's present 450 heavier-than-air craft.

Congress will be asked by the War Department, at the session convening in January, to adopt a program for building military plane strength up to 900.

Under this proposal, pursuit and bombardment squadrons would be brought up to their full peace-time quotas of 18 and 9 planes, respectively. Many pursuit squadrons now are operating with 12 or fewer craft.

The plan would increase the number of planes at Langley Field by about 25. At present 80 planes are assigned to the second bombardment wing there, 50 are in eighth pursuit group and 30 in the second bombardment group.

A Routine Job.

It is rumored that the position of Director of the Budget may be offered to one of the faithful supporters of the Administration whose chief qualification for office is his need of a job. Such a selection would ordinarily arouse active opposition from all who realize the high quality of ability and the expert knowledge which the post implies.

Under present conditions, however, it is hard to believe that a well-qualified man, who valued his reputation as an authority in fiscal matters, would desire to occupy the position vacated by Lewis Douglas. By common consent, Mr. Douglas was conceded to be able, fearless, and independent. And it was largely because of these admirable characteristics that he found it impossible to remain in office.

So long as Congress continues to follow its present haphazard appropriation policies, and so long as responsibility for the budgetary plan is hopelessly divided, a Budget Director has little scope for constructive leadership. He can not initiate policies or present a comprehensive plan for consideration by the Congress. Certainly the President can manage quite well with the aid of assistants familiar with the routine work of preparing a budget statement for 1936 if there is no disposition to institute real fiscal reforms looking toward budgetary balance.

For that task an energetic, determined and well-informed official will be needed. But his efforts will be largely wasted without fundamental reforms in present methods of budget making.

With Farley's Permission.

Commissioner Hazen's assurance that there will be no "carpetbagger raid" on District jobs is welcome news, but it does not remove the fundamental objections to the new personnel policy. The Commissioner knows, perhaps better than any one else, the weakness of good intentions when once the door has been opened to the spoils hunters. Indeed there is a highly ironic note in Mr. Hazen's statement that he has talked with the Postmaster General and found him "reasonable" about District patronage. The inference is that Washingtonians should deeply appreciate Mr. Farley's considerate and benevolent attitude on a matter in which his opinion ought not to be considered.

Of course the problem is difficult. Unscrupulous Congressmen frequently demand positions in the local government for constituents from their home towns. If the Commissioners fail to comply, they may find the job in question abolished or the salary greatly reduced by the next appropriation act. Very little time is given to legislation for the National Capital. A few disgruntled Congressmen may block important local measures, as was witnessed last winter. Moreover, the Commissioners themselves—except, of course, the Engineer Commissioner—are political appointees. In numerous ways they are vulnerable to bossism and the spoils system, when safeguards of the merit system are withdrawn.

Under these conditions the only way in which the Commissioners can protect the District against the patronage racket is through rigid adherence to Civil Service regulations. But they have deliberately sought to evade those regulations insofar as department heads and certain subordinates are concerned. The public interest calls for strengthening of the arrangement under which District employes are chosen from the Civil Service Commission's lists of eligibles. Instead, the Commissioners have weakened it. In short, they have given a cue to the patronage hunters, who never hesitate to take a yard when an inch is offered.

A Mystery Of The Air.

"It is positively uncanny," declares William Kavanaugh, an official of the American Racing Pigeon Union, which was in session last week in Chicago.

He refers to the fact, as evidenced by records, that fully 70 per cent of homing pigeons have vanished this year, have literally disappeared in midair. Of 5,007 birds released at Cedar Rapids early in September all but 457 failed to reach Chicago. And on September 14, 3,000 birds, practically all that remained of the blooded stock in the city by the lake, started home from Tama, Iowa, to race 250 miles, and only 900 reached the destination.

The missing birds were valued at many thousands of dollars. "But," says Mr. Kavanaugh, "it is not the loss that worries us so much as the reason for the loss. The instinct of a homing pigeon to fly home has been bred into the birds for thousands of years. Why should they be losing it now?"

If men who are acquainted with the habits of homing pigeons can not solve this mystery, then, coming from a layman, one surmise is as good as another. But research on the subject should be continued. The man who can discover what makes a homing pigeon disappear should be of value to those municipal officials who are baffled by the starling problem.

Diametrically Opposite.

Speaking on the occasion of the Lord Mayor's annual dinner to the merchants and bankers of London, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, discussed the pronounced improvement in economic conditions which has attracted world-wide attention to his country. Unlike President Roosevelt, Mr. Chamberlain refused to make any comparisons, invidious or otherwise, between conditions in Great Britain and other countries. "I rather deprecate," he said, "these comparisons between one country and another whether they are for us or against us. Conditions are never the same, and it may well be that what is right and proper for an old, highly developed country like ours is quite unsuitable for a newer community whose people are less experienced and perhaps less patient than ours."

Having thus diplomatically disavowed any intention of passing judgment, directly or indirectly, upon the policies of the United States or any other nation, the chancellor gave chief credit for Britain's recent advances to the ultra-cautious financial policies followed by the government. Those policies necessitated cuts in unemployment benefits, abandonment of wasteful public works, reduction in government salaries and other ruthless economies. The result has been a transformation of deficits into a budgetary surplus. This insistence upon sound fiscal policies has been a prime factor in restoring public confidence, badly shaken by the foreign run upon Britain's gold reserves and the consequent forced abandonment of the gold standard.

Britain's experiment with a managed currency was not, like ours, deliberately undertaken for the purpose of raising prices. On the contrary, the British have aimed to maintain a stable domestic price level and have achieved that stability to a remarkable degree. Consequently, with no inflationary price increases threatening, and a balanced budget in prospect, a sound basis was laid for the successful conversion operations of 1932.

British bankers undoubtedly cooperated fully in efforts to make this conversion loan a success, but the American bankers have been no less generous in their support of the Federal Government's financing plans. Indeed, they have done much more than the British banks to provide the needed funds by investing in Government securities. The latter, it is estimated, hold not more than 10 per cent of the total debt of their government in the form of securities, whereas American banks own or hold as collateral against loans probably 60 per cent of the total debt of our Government.

Moreover, the British banks have not shown any greater willingness than American banks to expand their commercial loans in advance of a trade recovery that would safely permit of such an increase. Leading British bankers have often openly and emphatically condemned such methods of putting the cart before the horse, and their government has had the good sense not to damn them for so doing.

Although comparisons of this sort are always subject to qualifications, they must in justice be made to counteract impressions gained from superficial differences or likenesses between British and American policies. So far as the financial field is concerned, it would be near the truth to say that the United States and Great Britain are following diametrically opposed policies.

Life And Mr. Dreiser.

Mr. Theodore Dreiser once wrote a dull novel about an exciting murder. He obscured its action by his attempt to explain it, and he called his attenuation "An American Tragedy." Now the prosecution in a Pennsylvania trial charges that the prisoner killed his discarded sweetheart somewhat as Mr. Dreiser's hero made away with his victim—and the news dispatches refer to the case as the "American Tragedy" murder. They insist that here is another instance of life imitating art.

The truth is that Mr. Dreiser was trying to copy actuality. The murder of which he told had already really happened—had been planned and carried out in grim life—whereas the novel was planless, and the only commendable phase of its execution was its execution of the murderer.

In theory "An American Tragedy" endeavored to reconstruct the crime and show the sociological conditions responsible for it. But in fact, most people read the book for its account of the trial—an account which was partly the mere retelling of court records and partly a piece of mediocre reporting. On the other hand, if the Pennsylvania case is what its prosecutor contends, it mimics the tragic events which the novel diluted and thus avoids the tedium of the novel.

Life may occasionally be said to imitate art, but to say that it imitates Mr. Dreiser is a good deal too easy on that author and far, far too hard on life.

Clothes Go International.

Fashion, ever capricious, is in truth playing the field this year. It's every woman for herself, the designer take the hindmost. Regardless of economic trends, clothes have gone international in a big way. In a magnanimous gesture, every nation has been accorded a seat in the League of Fashions.

There are Cossack hats, wide Spanish belts, Russian tunics loaded with astrakhan, Canadian Mounted Police sombreros, Scotch plaids, Bedouin mantles and Dutch ruffs around the neck. Moreover, this is a league committed to bimetallism. There is enough gold and silver in the dresses this year to pay off the war debts.

Romanticism is also being revived. There are Cromwell collars, Jacobin jackets, Louisa May Alcott muffs and Venetian tricornes. Stern reality is forgotten. Practicability is a thing of the past. The new dresses are made to fit the mood, not the place. Little Women styles are copied for night club wear and old-fashioned taffetas rustle in and out of barrooms.

It is hard to imagine Vionnet's 10-yard skirt ensconced in a taxicab or Molyneux's 45-inch one on the dance floor, but this is to be a winter of magic in clothes. Credulity has been outmoded, and when fashion dictates a willing regimentation sets in. It is "Ours but to buy and buy, ours not to reason why."

The New Air Force.

Reorganization of the flying units of the Army has been widely interpreted as a move to terminate the authority of Brig. Gen. Foulois without actually removing him from his position as chief of the Air Corps. It is recalled that dismissal of Gen. Foulois was recently demanded by a committee of the House, which investigated the purchasing methods of his staff, a request with which Secretary Dern promptly refused to comply. Casual observers are naturally inclined to regard the present development as a compromise solution.

As a matter of fact, it appears that there is no connection between the Foulois controversy and the shifting of 48 units of the air force to the direct command of the chief of staff. Plans for the general headquarters air force had been worked out before the House committee brought its charges. Acceptance of these plans followed completion of the recent war games in New Jersey, during which the efficiency of the new organization was tested. Two months previously this set-up had been approved in detail by the War Department's special committee on Army Air Corps, headed by former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

At least two important functions—training and control of supplies—will remain in the hands of the Air Corps. It is worthy of note that Gen. Foulois still retains jurisdiction over procurement—the division of his activities which was investigated by the House committee. His present functions remain in every way comparable to those of other division chiefs in the Army.

Apparently the only motives behind this reorganization are efficiency and economy. Some Army aviators have contended that the air force should be independent of the general staff because of the unique nature of the airplane as a weapon of defense. Gen. Foulois seems to be a member of this school. Others contend that the flying units should be fully coordinated with the artillery, infantry, &c., to reinforce the action of ground troops. At present sponsors of this theory are predominant. The Air Corps becomes, therefore, an ordinary unit of the Army, instead of a prima donna. This is a major change of policy and not a shifting of personnel.

It is pleasing to note that no effort is being made to dispose of the Foulois case by the reorganization method. Charges against him must be decided on their own merits, after all the facts have been brought out by an unprejudiced agency.

Belated Silver Discoveries.

The recent protest of the Chinese government has already had one good result. It has forced our authorities to take cognizance of the actual as opposed to the advertised effects of our silver-buying policy. When this policy was being debated in Congress, well-informed speakers demolished the argument that China would benefit by an advance in silver prices. Banking experts also pointed out that a rise in silver would have a deflationary effect upon Chinese domestic prices and, by increasing the exchange value of the currency in terms of gold, make it increasingly difficult for China to maintain her export trade.

Even before our benevolent plan to help China was approved, Sir Arthur Salter, as an economic adviser to the Chinese government, had noted the depressing effect upon Chinese foreign trade with the rise in the value of Chinese money in terms of the depreciated currencies of Great Britain, the United States, Japan and India. Moreover, Chinese bankers and financial experts familiar with conditions in the Far East explained that China paid for her imports with the proceeds of her exports and that silver held within the country would not greatly increase purchases abroad. In face of such piled-up evidence, and despite the clear logic of the situation, the silver bloc in Congress clung to the ridiculous assertion that the silver program was a philanthropic gesture toward the nations of the Far East.

The predicted dislocation began to be manifest following the President's nationalization order, which has resulted in heavy exports of silver from China. It is now rumored that if this movement is not checked, the Nanking government will impose an embargo upon silver shipments. There is even a report that China may offer to exchange silver for gold in contemplation of ultimate adoption of the gold standard.

As a result, our Treasury has been compelled to consider the effect of its silver-buying policy upon the rest of the world. The Chinese protest has exposed the inaccuracies and the hypocritical pretenses of those members of Congress who professed to be concerned about China, when they really voted to bestow largesse upon speculators in silver. And the policy is showing up for the hollow sham which those with any knowledge of the situation defined it in advance.

Now, Where Are Those Snipe?

A Criticism of Mr. Hoover's Philosophy

The argument of former President Hoover that NRA policies are a challenge to liberty is based upon several false assumptions—primarily, that a fundamental issue relating to liberty is involved in the NRA. The NRA represents a slight extension of the principle of social control of industry and finance through Government, and the argument of Mr. Hoover proceeds upon the assumption that a slight extension of Governmental control involves all of human liberty. This is the fundamental flaw in his reasoning.

The entire history of civilization is a record of the steady extension of the powers of Government over the processes of industry and finance in an effort to curb the greed and rapacity of individuals in their overexercise of an unrestricted individualism.

The former President could have written precisely this same argument at any given moment that any modern government passed a law restricting the liberty of individuals in the management of industry or finance. The most striking example of extension of social control (or to borrow Hoover's phrase, "regimentation") is found in the factory acts of the British Parliament under the leadership of Lord Shaftesbury.

It is precisely 100 years since Lord Shaftesbury first persuaded the English Parliament to pass the first of the great factory acts. These acts grouped together constituted an English NRA. They were a far greater restriction on the liberty of the unrestrained British factories and coal miners than is the legislation of the National Recovery Act.

Hoover ought to have lived then and to have written his article at that time because his encomiums on the liberty of the English capitalists would have found a warm welcome in the breasts of the great English lords, the aristocratic coal barons, who were exploiting the poor in England. Every British factory owner (save Robert Owen) rose in undisguised hostility to protest against the restraints on his individualism; to fight the "regimentation," which would prevent his further exploiting and starving his employes.

The attitude of the English capitalist of that day was precisely that of Herbert Hoover today. It was strikingly expressed by the famous English historian, Green, in his "Short History of the English People." Speaking of the attitude of the capitalists of that day, he said (on page 838):

> The ideal of the Tory aristocracy was a world where the rich should guide and protect the poor, who under this guardianship should obediently labor for a modest customary wage, while the welfare of all was secured by a changeless constitution.

The second misassumption of former President Hoover lies in assuming that the wise prevision of American policy in now exerting a slight social control over industry and finance is identical with the industrial and political tyrannies and despotisms of history.

His third error is in assuming that freedom is something different from the freedom guaranteed by the Constitution. Here is his definition:

> Liberty is a thing of the spirit—to be free to worship, to think, to hold opinions, and to speak without fear—free to challenge wrong and oppression.

The primary requisites of freedom lie in the overt acts of man, in actual physical personal liberty. These are safeguarded specifically in the Constitution and not one of them has been disregarded in the NRA. If the restrictions of the National Recovery Act are a denial of any right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, then every other restriction on capital, secured through legislation in this country in the last 100 years, is likewise a denial of some Constitutional right. The very argument of Hoover defeats itself.

The utterance of the former President in a leading magazine (given with his customary freedom and trenchant fearlessness) is proof that his own Constitutional rights have not been abridged or denied.

The next mistake of Mr. Hoover lies in assuming that intellectual and spiritual freedom can not exist unless there also be economic freedom. The vague generalization with which Hoover couches his assertion might stand the test. But the flaw in it lies in assuming that economic freedom means complete economic freedom. There has been no unrestricted, unlimited economic freedom in this Nation for approximately 100 years. If the constant restrictions on economic freedom which the Federal Government and the States have imposed (in a thousand laws which restrain individual capitalists) is such a denial of economic freedom as Hoover means, then intellectual and spiritual freedom were long since lost in this country—decades before the NRA became the policy of the Nation.

The next false assumption of our former President is in assuming that specific limitations on individual freedom imposed by the Government in the interest of public welfare are in themselves denials of liberty. This is precisely the point at which the advocates of government limitation of individual greed meet the opposition of those who favor the return to the unrestrained license of an unlimited capitalistic individualism.

The very essence of liberty is that it shall be liberty within the limits of the Constitution and the law. Liberty under the law is the only liberty Americans have ever known. It is the only liberty a civilized people dare allow to themselves, and the whole question is how far the Government—through law—shall restrain individual liberty.

It is not a question of whether any liberty shall be restrained. It is purely a question of what degree of restraint shall be exercised—what specific liberties the Government must take away from men in order that they can not oppress their fellow men. There can be no fundamental issue of restraints on liberty in a Nation where the Government must act for all to preserve the public welfare.

His next false assumption is that great capitalists must have economic freedom in order that the country may prosper and that all men's liberty may be preserved. He desires freedom for the bankers, for the privateers of finance, and for the great captains of industry, and he desires freedom for them to do as they please. He has overlooked the freedom of the man and woman whose toil makes capital possible. There must be liberty for the man in the factory and at the forge and behind the counter. Again we appeal to history, Green, page 864:

> Liberals, who were willing to aid in protecting children, were united against any suggestions of state interference with the "liberty" to work of young persons and women * * * Current economic theories taught that men must inevitably choose either relief by legislation of the suffering poor or the welfare of the state, but could not secure both; since the source of all hope, and cure of social misery, must lie in the freedom of individuals liberated from restrictions and left to take their interests into their own hand. These doctrines were now challenged with increasing energy and passion.

Not only does history overthrow the former President, but the great leaders of American thought and action have long since taken a position which absolutely challenges the position he now assumes. It was Theodore Roosevelt as Vice President, who said on Labor Day at Minneapolis, 1901, "The time is coming when we must shackle cunning as we have shackled force." A week from that day the man who uttered those words was President of the United States.

Was Theodore Roosevelt right? How may "cunning" be shackled? How would former President Hoover shackle cunning? By a tap on the wrist, by social ostracism, by friendly appeals to the authors of wrongdoing—or by the power of the Government of the United States? Mr. Hoover says that the theory of the New Deal is that the "state is the master of the man." This is pure misstatement. The theory of the New Deal is that the state is the master of that man who uses his individual liberty to crush or exploit another man.

If the state shall not be the master of an unrestrained capitalist, who shall be?

Woodrow Wilson stated the true theory of progressives and of those who believe in the New Deal when he said that "government is the agent of society" for all social purposes. It was Theodore Roosevelt who said in a speech that "in the great contests between the individual citizen and the great corporate organizations, the citizen can look only to his government to shield and protect him in the conflict." This is precisely the opposite of the Hoover doctrine. The doctrine of Theodore Roosevelt is the animating purpose and spirit behind the NRA—introduced now by another Roosevelt.

If Mr. Hoover is right, then the railroad owners have had their liberty denied since 1887, when the Interstate Commerce Act was passed. This was the first restriction upon the great railroad capitalists. It was the first extension of government control over a vast industry in America. That power has been steadily extended. Under no circumstances would any Administration give it up. Under no circumstances, would the people permit any government to give it up. What does Herbert Hoover propose as to the "regimentation" of railroads?

Another mistake of the former President lies in his argument that the NRA is a denial of some essential liberty of the individual industrial overlords of America. If this argument is correct, and the NRA is an encroachment upon liberty and should be given up, then the following liberties (which the NRA took away) should be restored to the individual capitalists of America: First, the liberty to exploit the labor of little children in the factories of America; second, the liberty to pay starvation wages to millions of American workers; third, the liberty to work labor long and exhausting hours; fourth, the liberty of the New York Stock Exchange to carry on the unfortunate transactions which have so long characterized high finance in America.

These four restrictions upon liberty are the four that Herbert Hoover apparently desires to eliminate. This is the real issue upon which the former President proposes to go to the country. It is an issue which the progressive forces of the Nation, under the wise, fair, Constitutional leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt, will go forth to battle. It is a challenge that shall be met.

Johnson and Grit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read, with interest, Carlisle Bargeron's recent article on Gen. Johnson, called "Greatness or What!" It certainly would not be creditable to denounce Gen. Johnson's being great. He was confronted by a laborious task when he undertook to shoulder the NRA, but he adhered until he saw fit to resign. He, overflowing with grit and vigor, gave a hand to our Nation in its hour of dire need. We should recognize his willingness to serve and how, without flinching, he toiled to make the NRA a success!

The New Reticence?

Postoffice, Thursday.

AWHILE ago the editor of what Edwin Balmer ranks as "a high-brow" magazine wrote to him, the editor of the successful "Red Book," saying:

"We are in a quandary as to how far it is wise to go in for the use of tabooed words . . . Would you tell me whether or not you permit, in your pages, such words?"

And Mr. Balmer replied . . .

"Let us leave out any question of the absolute rightness or wrongness of anything," he suggests in the pages of another popular publication—"Esquire," to wit. "Let us leave it merely to taste, good or bad . . . There is probably nothing more moral or 'right' in employing Latin-derived euphemisms rather than the crude Anglo-Saxon vulgarities . . . but it is certainly better manners." Our modern American writers of fiction, says he, "not only have exhausted the dictionary, but have tapped, for fresher obscenities, the treasuries of the back-fence thesaurus." . . .

So, said Mr. Balmer to the hesitant highbrow, in "The Red Book" shop they draw a line through certain expressions lately "indigenous to American manuscripts." They even sometimes substitute milder expletives.

Now, Mr. Balmer is at least significant. Whether you approve or condemn his point of view, it is that of the popular magazine.

However, the book publishers have long held another thesis. "The Red Book" ran "The Thin Man" as a serial. Mr. Balmer tells us: "In the manuscript as it came to me were lines which did not enhance the story. On one of the pages was a phrase . . . which had never before reached my desk, and I drew a pencil through those words."

But then "The Thin Man" appeared in book form. Its publishers, according to Mr. Balmer, were "a firm famous for maintenance of high literary standards . . . I wanted," he continues, "to see what editing—if any—had been done to certain passages distinguished for the New Candor. I could have spared myself the trouble. The publishers preserved the phrase . . . referred to it in advertisements."

Therefore, Mr. Balmer wants to know what the book publishers are going to do next.

They have, he declares, been welcoming a condition of literary nudism "which is an artistic loss. Upon the pages of novels, as in nudist camps, we find too many people whose sole claim to attention is that they have their clothes off. It is far easier to provide oneself with 'courage' to copy the alley fence than to think up something really distinguished to say. It is far, far easier to be 'courageous' than creative."

Well, we are not so sure that the book publishers will remain intransigent. Their autumn lists give tokens of a mild literary winter:

Here comes the time of yellowed leaves
And butterflies a-dozing;
On faded flowers Apida grieves—
The Nudist Camps are closing.

So chants our friend Mike Shuman, sweet singer of the Susquehanna. And he concludes:

I mean those camps where folks are wrapped
In thought and naught beside it;
Right soon they'll all be locked and strapped:
Can lit'ry souls abide it?

If Fashion rigidly insists
Along her earlier channels,
Won't e'en our nudist novelists
Crawl into winter flannels?

Shuman belongs to the Obscurantist School of poets and, it is whispered, was black-balled by the Poet Laureate League, Inc. Yet anybody can get the gist of that lyric.

The poet wonders:

Now that mere citizens are beginning at least to think about their heavy overcoats, are not novelists again thinking about clothes? Clothes, he means, not as ornament for either themselves or their characters; but clothes somewhat in the Balmer-Carlyle sense, clothes as a mere covering, as what was called a decency when there were standards called The Decencies.

In brief, Shuman inquires, hasn't the New Candor gone so far that there isn't anywhere left for it to go—that there isn't anything left to be candid about? And although (asks Mr. Shuman) the writers remain heroically tireless, aren't their sales records beginning to convince the publishers that the distances along which those writers dragged their readers have left the readers a bit foot-sore?

There is something to be s[illegible] this suggestion, you know.

After all, it is only the [illegible] who buy the books.

And it is only from the sales [illegible] the writers and the publishers gat[illegible] susienance.

You may remember that Voltaire—yes, we insist it was Voltaire; not Victoria!—disapproving of the morals of a volume of his own time, asked the author why he wrote it, that the author pleaded having written it because "I have to live," and that Voltaire thereupon replied:

"I do not see the necessity."

But we venture to believe that the author saw the necessity!

What was true of him in his day may be true in reverse of his modern successors. When the buying public has tired of frankness the purveying pens may offer restraint. Why not mix a metaphor? When the old candor has shouted itself hoarse there may begin to burgeon the blossoms of a new reticence.

Backstage.

BARGERON

BACKSTAGE it has been known for some time that Mr. Roosevelt, instead of being a Socialist or a left-winger, is really a capitalist who is trying to save the capitalistic system by indirect means. This implies, and indeed, backstage it is known, that he is smarter than the other capitalists in that he can tell when a storm is brewing while they are ostriches with their heads in the sand. What he is, between you and me, is an intelligent capitalist, and being an intelligent capitalist, the best friend the other capitalists ever had, although they look upon him as very dangerous.

Here is the low-down from backstage:

Mr. Roosevelt when he assumed office perceived that the country was in a mean mood, that it was on a rampage and that the capitalistic system was thereby in danger.

• • • •

He realized that the fault with our capitalists was that when trouble brewed they didn't have sense enough to make concessions. History shows that in other countries the ruling classes have been overthrown because they were blind to the handwritings on the wall, that they would not admit anything was wrong until it was too late and they were out on their necks.

Mr. Roosevelt saw immediately that to try to suppress the clamor in this country would have simply kindled the flames. The thing to do—the general public, of course, didn't know, but the wise boys backstage did—was to let the crack-pots and inflammatory spirits run their course and finally become decimated in their own folly.

Nothing could more effectively prove the utter nonsense of what the radicals were offering than to let them try their plans out. In this way the plans and their sponsors would come to grief.

• • • •

To this end, as we understand it backstage, Mr. Roosevelt planned to set aside a period, say two years, three years or five, for the trial of every brain-storm idea that was advanced and also for the punishment of the malefactors of great wealth, at the conclusion of which he could go ahead and bring about recovery.

For this reason and although he may give an entirely different impression, it is known backstage that he welcomes the appearance of Jouett Shouse's Liberty League because this league will help him at the next session of Congress ward off some of the plans which he knows are injurious to the capitalistic system and which if he is forced to try out will but prolong the trial period which he has in mind before embarking upon his recovery program. Yes sir, it is not generally known, but backstage Mr. Roosevelt and the Liberty League are just like this.

• • • •

There is now the matter of the silver policy. Backstage it is known that Mr. Roosevelt never thought this would do any good. But why try to out-shout in such times as these Messrs. Thomas, Borah, Key Pittman, Wheeler et al. They were imbued with the idea that they were monetary experts and nobody could make them think otherwise. The unintelligent capitalists wanted simply to ignore these people, but Mr. Roosevelt knew the thing to do was to let them find out for themselves that as monetary experts they were the bunk.

What would be better, it was asked backstage, than to eliminate these gentlemen for all time as monetary experts by letting them have their way? Mr. Roosevelt's purpose has been wholly misunderstood.

Backstage then plan was to make these gentlemen look very foolish.

Front-stage, it did.

WILLIAM "BILLY" MITCHELL, brigadier general, U. S. A., retired. His pungent denunciations, suggestions and criticism have provided spice in the day's aviation news since the day in 1925 when his charges of "criminal negligence" against the "bureaucrats" of the Air Service, brought him before a court-martial and subsequently forced his consequent resignation from the service. Activities limited these days to raising horses, wearing fine clothes, and appearing with the "horsey" set, where his ever-present cane, double-breasted vest and binoculars indicated the sporting country gentleman he now is. Veteran of stormy engagements during the war, former head of the Air Force, he is still more than an interested observer at every arising aviation controversy. With a quick rise of his eyebrow, a brisk gesture and a glint in his brown eyes, he says, "I've only begun to fight."

Heavy U. S. Borrowing After Jan. 1 Certain

Financial Program, Subject of Conflicting Speculation, Likely to Be Withheld Until Congress Meets.

(Associated Press.)

The Government's financial program, with the first quarter of the fiscal year left well behind, yesterday was the subject of more conflicting speculation than at any time in months.

Reports that an additional $1,000,000,000 or more would be sought for relief this winter met the same silence in Treasury circles as the question of how the money would be raised to meet heavy emergency expenditures already definitely scheduled between now and July 1.

Treasury officials said any light on either the budget or the tax plans to be presented to Congress probably would have to await the President's message in January.

One thing is certain. Whether or not relief expenditures increase above those now projected, heavy borrowing of new money must be undertaken some time after the first of the year.

In addition, the Government must meet $5,000,000,000 of maturing obligations, largely six-month bills and other short-term paper, before July 1.

The approach of October 15, the last day on which approximately $8,270,000,000 of fourth 4¼ Liberty bonds may be called for payment April 15, drew attention to the President's reference in his Sunday speech to the $150,000,000 interest saving effected by Great Britain in its 1932 conversion operation. England then called in $10,000,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds, offering either 3½s or cash in exchange.

In some quarters, this was taken as a plain implication that at least part of the Liberties would be called for refunding at lower rates.

4¼s Not Now Callable Until June 15.

The Treasury, however, permitted September 15 to go by without calling $535,981,500 of first 4¼s for the next interest date, December 15, and these can not be called now until June 15. Three months' prior notice is required.

Some observers believe that the maturing of more than $1,100,000,000 of other obligations December 15 and January 1, together with the probability that additional new money might be sought early in the year, impelled a decision to let these remain outstanding for the present.

Whether the Government could conduct a large scale conversion operation and a substantial interest saving without a considerable increase in its relatively short term debt was questioned in some quarters. Of the $1,200,000,000 of Fourth 4¼s called for October 15, less than $300,000,000 have been presented for 10-12 year 3¼s as against almost $600,000,000 offered for four year 2½ per cent notes. The books on the notes have been closed.

Treasury officials said the demand for the notes was largely from bank holders of the called Libertys, anxious to switch to shorter term securities.

The speech of Neville Chamberlain, British counselor of the exchequer, Tuesday night, emphasizing that the pound would retain its independence regardless of "powerful influences" was the subject of considerable discussion.

Chamberlain Statement Arouses Comment.

In some quarters it was interpreted as a flat warning that England was ready to meet any possible further devaluation of the dollar.

Chamberlain's statement that the British people, in seeking recovery, had pursued "ultra cautious" measures aroused much comment, in view of the President's reference to England's disregard of orthodoxy in its economic moves.

In this connection, some financial observers said the British conversion operations which the President had cited were highly orthodox. The government had prepared for it by embarking on a budget-balancing program entailing the slashing of expenditures and the imposition of additional taxes.

The President's statement at his press conference yesterday that no consideration had been given to the appointment of a new budget director called attention to the probability that the most important phases of the budget this year doubtless will be worked out under close supervision of Secretary Morgenthau, acting for the White House.

The National Industrial Recovery Board yesterday announced that William Jett Lauck, Fredericksburg, Va., economist, has been appointed to the committee to study and hear protests on the cotton garment industry code labor amendments. Mr. Lauck will replace Father Francis J. Haas, who is unable to serve because of his father's illness.

Mr. Lauck was statistician for the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation in 1915-17, and the United States Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board, 1917-18; assistant director of the industrial relations section of the Signal Corps, 1918; secretary of the National Labor Board, 1918-19, and adviser to the President's Organization for Unemployment Relief in 1931.

District Attorney—Are all the cameramen here?

Assistant—Yes sir. All two hundred of 'em.

District Attorney—Are the talking movie machines ready to proceed?

Movie Men—Yes sir. And please speak distinctly!

District Attorney—Is the prisoner here yet?

A Policeman—No.

District Attorney—Why not?

A Policeman—He's still being photographed for press and screen.

District Attorney—I thought they photographed him for press and screen yesterday.

A Policeman—They did, sir, and the day before yesterday, but the photographers thought up some new poses. Yesterday they took his picture standing, sitting and reclining in the Bertillon fingerprint department. Today they are snapping him walking, leaping and cantering through the rogue's gallery. I understand that tomorrow he is to be photographed in the police department swimming pool or something.

• • • •

Judge—When does this hearing begin anyhow?

District Attorney—I am sorry to keep you waiting, your honor. Are you anxious for the trial to start?

Judge—I don't care about the trial, but I don't like to get my hair all oiled up for the newsreels and then have to wait.

A Court Attendant—I saw you on the screen after that last gangster trial, judge, and you certainly do screen well.

Judge—A lot of my friends tell me I look like Clark Gable.

• • • •

A Detective (to the district attorney)—Did you send for me?

District Attorney—Yes. You're the first witness.

Detective—I won't be ready for a couple of hours.

District Attorney—Why not?

Detective—I've just dug up a most important clew and I'll have to be photographed with it first.

District Attorney—Couldn't you bring it here so we can all get in on the picture rights?

Judge—If it's an important clew maybe we ought not to put it in the press and newsreels. It might hurt our case.

Detective—Don't be old-fashioned, judge. You must have been brought up in the days when important criminals were tried in the courts instead of in the picture theaters.

Judge—Why, I can remember away back when a court would go ahead with its proceedings whether everybody had been photographed or not.

District Attorney—Yes indeed. And I can recall a time when justice could be done regardless of lighting and sound effects.

Both—Ah, the good old days! May they never come again!

• • • •

Judge—Bring on the prisoner!

A Court Attendant (excitedly)—Your honor, the prisoner refuses to have anything to do with this court.

Judge—Why?

Attendant—He says he's been signed up by a Hollywood syndicate.

When the next big ocean tragedy occurs the various investigating boards will convene and investigate all over again, with the usual radio hook-up. Overworked stewards, bartender and watchmen will be grilled mercilessly. A witness will interrupt his story to grab the microphone and ask to be remembered to "the red-haired girl." Everything will be gone into except what became of the previous recommendations to avert steamship disasters and who had them sidetracked.

Child Treatment.

The test of parental wisdom comes when the children are too old to spank.

While the child is small, it may controlled by threat and force. But obedience obtained by threat is unwilling and resentful, and it ends when the threat is no longer feared.

The training of children, horses or men requires discipline, and discipline requires threat of punishment; but unless the child's obedience is prompted by respect, comradeship and affection, parental control will end when the fear of punishment ends.

Training a child to obey is a simple matter, requiring no more than patience, honesty and good sense.

When anxious parents attempt some suggested method of training and report it a failure, the fault usually is not in the method but in the parents themselves. They began five or ten years too late.

The time to begin the shaping of character is long before the child can walk.

The most common error of parents is the assumption that a child has no intelligence. When they say it is remarkably bright they mean it is surprisingly intelligent for a child. They treat it much as they would a feeble-minded adult.

The normal child is mentally honest—as few adults are. It is fair and logical. It doesn't fool itself.

In the beginning it thinks its parents all-wise, faultless and incapable of error. And when it discovers they are dishonest, unfair, deceitful, unreasonable, petty and unreliable, it gives up trying to understand them or their standards and concludes that adult lives and ways are illogical mysteries.

To develop a child's mind and character and win its respect and loyalty, treat it as you would an intelligent adult. Don't lie to it. Don't break your promises. Don't deceive or trick it. Don't be unfair or unreasonable. Don't be a petty tyrant merely because you have the physical strength to get away with it.

The average parent would have nobody's respect or confidence if he treated adults as he does his child.

And the poor kid, knowing his parent is perfect and yet unfair and untruthful, can only surrender to puzzlement and quit trying to use his mind in such a contradictory world.

"WITHOUT GLOVES," by Frank R. Kent (Morrow, $2.50). A selection from Mr. Kent's "The Great Game of Politics" column in the Baltimore Sun, written daily to make a deadline, but pleasingly sharp and sensible. Mr. Kent is a "conservative Democrat," speaking out for the "unorganized goats," the great middle class of taxpayers, against the waste of experiment in government.

• • • •

"Roosevelt Versus Recovery," by Ralph West Robey (Harper, $2). A leading "sound money" critic of the New Deal, armed with financial knowledge, argues persuasively that Roosevelt and his policies stand in the path of a National recovery which was coming anyway. Mr. Robey was up until recently the financial columnist of The Post. Felix Morley, our editor, reviewed this book on last Sunday's opposite editorial page.

• • • •

"Beyond the New Deal," by David Lawrence (Whittlesey House, $2.50). The editor of the weekly United States News and National affairs correspondent for 100 newspapers, has some things to say in favor of the New Deal. But principally he is worried over the future—the precedent of a paternal government, the burdensome cost of the program, and the precariousness of "individual liberty."

• • • •

"The New Deal in Action," by Schuyler C. Wallace (Harper, $2). The professor of public law at Columbia, nonpartisan but largely sympathetic, narrates the progressive steps of the New Deal and says: "At the moment, the United States is much better off by virtue of the recovery program than it was before that program was inaugurated."

• • • •

"Liberty Under Law and Administration," by Homer Cummings (Scribner, $1.50). Lectures by the Attorney General at the University of Virginia which claim with considerable weight that the maximum of individual freedom "can not necessarily be achieved by assertions of that 'rugged individualism' which may have suited the days of our economic adolescence."

• • • •

"Collapse and Recovery," by James Dysart Magee (Harper, $3). An able and thorough exposition, rather than argument, of all National efforts toward recovery beginning with the Hoover administration. This professor of economics of New York University writes the sort of ground-work book which will help you to form your own opinion of these other gentlemen's views.

• • • •

"The Science of Economy," by Ludwig Kotany, Ph. D., of Vienna (Putnam, $3.50). A vigorous, learned and thoroughly important work which takes up economics from a fresh angle. Pointing out that classical economics is based on legal conceptions rather than on economic practice, Dr. Potany strikes out for himself, using the latest findings in every other field from Einsteinian relativity to anthropology. The book is solid reading, but worth your closest attention.

"Unfair Trade Practices: How to Remove Them," by Lincoln Filene (Harper, $1.50). The chairman of the board of Boston's famous department store, William Filene's Sons, and a man active for years in the constructive improvement of business methods, points out what cries aloud to be done in removing the obvious wastes caused by unfair dealing between producer and distributor. He loses no time in a philosophic discussion of the NRA, but gets down to cases at once on the opportunities opened by the codes.

"The Rise and Fall of the Gold Standard,' by Sir Charles Morgan-Webb (Macmillan, $1.50). A very readable, brief exposition of this usually hazy topic. Sir Charles made his name in the Indian Civil Service, then gilded it with his notable, almost single-handed reconstruction of the city of Rangoon, Burma.

• • • •

"The Coming American Boom," by L. L. B. Angas (Simon & Schuster, $1.50). You may care to read Maj. Angas' prophecy, which ran serially in The Post, in its published form as a large pamphlet. It holds so rosy a view of America's financial future that several editions were bought up at once by Wall Street investment houses for free distribution to their customers.

"Fascism and Social Revolution," Marxist and editor of the British Publishers, $2.25). The well-known Marxist and editor of the British Labor Monthly charges great guns at Fascism as "the organization of social decay." Lively and important reading.

"Outline of Governments," by Roger Shaw (Review of Reviews, $1.50). The foreign editor of Review of Reviews, author last spring of "Handbook of Revolutions," writes an exceedingly useful little handbook explaining, country by country, the government, history, politics, economics and leading men of our time. Maps and brief statistics are included.

It is just the book needed to help us understand the foreign news in the newspapers.

Charlie Dillingham.

The death of Charles Bancroft Dillingham in New York on August 30 was mourned by a vast number of people, many of them very prominent in the theatrical world, and many of them obscure individuals to whom he had been kind and generous. Although he was a czar in the world of drama, having produced 250 plays, I always think of him as Charlie Dillingham, for when we were both small boys in Hartford, we were intimate friends. Even as a child, he had that tremendous zest for life and fun and activity that characterized his crowded career. I well remember his saying when we were skating in Hartford at Sharp's, and playing shinny, "I'd rather do this than eat!"

He was born in Hartford, May 30, 1868. When he was 10 years old, Moody and Sankey came to Hartford and conducted services in the rink for many weeks, making a lifelong impression on thousands of people. Charlie's father was a devout Christian, and wanted his son to have a college education and enter the ministry, but when 18 years old he went to Wyoming, where he was a cowboy for three years. Then he entered the newspaper world as a reporter in Chicago and was a friend of Eugene Field, George Ade, Finley Dunne, Harry Smith, and others.

When Charles Frohman came to Chicago, Dillingham was assigned to interview him. But Charles would not see Little Charles, so the latter published a fake interview, which attracted the attention of the great manager, who advised him to go to New York. After a brief experience of newspaper work, he became press agent for Charles Frohman, and soon started out on his own hook.

The rest is a part of the history of the theater in the United States. He made millions and lost millions, but never lost his nerve or his good nature. He said, "I've gone from musical comedy to trained elephants, from Elsie Janis to the Metropolitan Opera."

Although one of the busiest men in the world, he found time every day to perform acts of kindness.

Hauptmann's Trial Is Slated for Oct. 11

also indicated this was the plan.

"Unless some special rights of the people of the State of New Jersey would interfere," the Bronx district attorney said, "the people propose to go to trial October 11."

The proceedings before Judge Barrett took only a few minutes. James M. Fawcett, Hauptmann's counsel, argued for a delay.

"I ask a reasonable length of time for preparation," he told the court. "I feel that 60 days is the earliest date on which the case could be tried."

Judge Barrett brushed aside the objections promptly, saying "the date for trial is set for October 11."

Hauptmann Still Sullen.

The prisoner had been brought from the Bronx County Jail, his first absence from his cell in several days, to the district attorney's office. Unshaven, but wearing a clean blue shirt, Hauptmann maintained the same sullen silence that has marked previous court appearances.

Sheriff John J. Hanley, Foley and Fawcett conferred with Judge Barrett before opening the brief session. They were reported to have discussed the drawing of a panel of 150 veniremen for the extortion trial jury. The drawing was ordered to begin tomorrow.

Indications that memorandum books found in Hauptmann's home were providing valuable information to New Jersey investigators were strengthened by their refusal to discuss the notations.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State police, said anything in the notebooks is "evidence and can not be disclosed." He had been asked specifically about reports that the books included a sketch of a ladder similar to that which was used in the Lindbergh baby's abduction.

Strong Clews Claimed.

The New Jersey authorities are checking Hauptmann's precise entries with extreme care, it was learned, and one official said these had provided some of their strongest clews.

The Bronx investigation was confined, for the greater part, to routine questioning of secondary witnesses, although officials were attempting to obtain identification of Hauptmann's companion is the purchase of a wood panel at a Bronx lumber yard last February.

At that time Hauptmann offered a $10 gold certificate in payment, but when the bill was examined, his companion retrieved it and paid for the panel with 40 cents in small change.

Ben Lupica, a Princeton (N. J.) student, who was reported as having said he saw Hauptmann near Hopewell, N. J., at about the time of the kidnaping, also was questioned.

Col. Murphy's Funeral Today At Arlington

Hero of War Between the States Died at 85 in Chevy Chase.

Funeral services for Col. Robinson Barr Murphy, 85, of 3823 Legation street, Chevy Chase, who won the Congressional Medal for his heroism in the War Between the States, will be held today at 11 a. m. in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

When President Lincoln called for volunteers at the outbreak of the war, Col. Murphy, then 13, enlisted as a drummer boy. He was decorated for gallantry on the battlefield and breveted a lieutenant before the conflict ended.

When he returned to civil life, Col. Murphy engaged in business in his home, Oswego, Ill. Later he represented a well-known wholesale concern in various parts of the country. He came to Washington about 15 years ago, and retired five years later.

One of the few survivors of the fighting 127th Illinois Volunteers, Col. Murphy was a familiar and beloved figure at G. A. R. reunions, where he mingled with his comrades of the fast-thinning ranks of the veterans who wore blue.

Col. Murphy is survived by his daughters, Mrs. Martha C. Macatee, of Washington, and Mrs. R. Bruce Rinker, of St. Pirsburg, Fla.

Reedsville Homestead Project Is Defended by Mrs. Roosevelt

Experimental Nature of Plan Explains Its Expense, She Says.

The critical tone of several recent articles on the Reedsville, W. Va., subsistence homestead project is due to the lack of understanding of its purposes, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday in her first press conference since her vacation ended.

"The whole program," he said, "is experimental, and that accounts for some of the greater expense than was originally planned."

Of her travels, Mrs. Roosevelt said the people of the West are really thinking.

"I found the people on their toes, thinking of new things to do. They all bore a more hopeful aspect. I found more people telling me about things that were going better, rather than what was wrong."

In the Midwest she found many citizens driving cars of good makes, and on the whole the people were well dressed. Of course, she added, many do need help.

In connection with the Reedsville project, it was announced that a survey is to be made to determine the highest level of living possible under the incomes of the project beneficiaries.

A home economic cottage, where girls of the community may be taught home making will be erected.

Reedsville a Laboratory.

The Government, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out, undertook to keep Reedsville in its own hands as a sort of laboratory. Things learned at this project, she said, will benefit a great majority of homestead projects being operated by local committees. "With the aid of private funds it is hoped to experiment in rural education, health problems as well as community life, and handicraft work," she said. "These experiments probably will not be reproduced in any other place in their entirety."

Of the critical articles on the Reedsville project, Mrs. Roosevelt said: "If a Government agency is doing a useless and wasteful piece of work, it is of course helpful to bring that to the attention of the public. However, it is far more useful to understand what are the underlying objective of a governmental movement and to be sure that what you are doing is to give an accurate picture.

"In this case a little more investigation would have revealed some human stories to be found among the families well worth the writing, and proving without further comment the justification for Government experiments along the lines undertaken."

Younger Set Gives Party At 'Old Barn'

Miss Mary Howes and Miss Claggett Are Honor Guests.

Ox Yoke, Cartwheel and Barnyard Specials on Menu.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The debutantes are apparently getting off to an early start this season with their parties, and already are forming in the inevitable cliques, and choosing their favorite dancing and dining places. Last evening, a large group of this season's debs, with their young escorts, gave a party at Brooke Johns' Old Barn, near Norbeck, Md., in honor of Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, and Miss Silvine Claggett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bowie Conte Claggett, of Upper Marlboro, Md.

About 25 couples gathered at the delightful night club at 9 o'clock after dining in various places in town. The air last evening was clear and cold, and the girls, bundled in heavy wraps, were swept into the spacious main room of the Old Barn with a puff of wind and lots of gay chatter, just as the girls of many years ago must have entered the barn for quilting bees, barn dances and corn-husking parties.

For the Old Barn has been standing for 100 years, and in spite of its and new paint, electric fixtures nd very ultra old-fashioned atmosphere, has probably seen generations of young people.

Under their warm cloaks the debutantes last evening wore all manner of charming evening frocks, which somehow are incongruous in the Old Barn, for smart Capital society gathers there two nights a week to make merry to the tunes of the dance orchestra, and Brooke Johns' own irresistible banjo playing.

Novel Menu Offered.

Late in the evening the young people spent a good deal of time deciding on the supper dishes from the amusing menu, which included Ox Yoke Special, Cartwheel Special (a new name for the usual scrambled eggs with little "piggies"), Barnyard Special or Brooke Johns' Special. All these things are good, and the fat cook from right there in Maryland knows just how to make things tastiest.

Mrs. W. W. Howes, mother of one of the honor guests, who was one of the chaperons, had on a becoming gown of black velvet made on severely plain lines. Her daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes, was wearing a frock of black velvet with a short perky jacket of flame velvet. Mrs. Barge L. Harts, another chaperon, wore a gown of black velvet made with a square neckline in the front and a deep decolletage. The severity of the black was relieved with bright jeweled clips on the belt. Mrs. Jack Marshall was wearing a gown of black satin made on princess lines. Miss Mary Katherine Spinks had on a dinner gown of deep wine-colored crepe, which was trimmed with cocoa fox.

Miss Bette Hartz, who is Amy of Washington's "Little Women," wore a frock of ice-blue satin made on Grecian lines with a slit skirt and a capelet of dark blue celophane spangle. In keeping with her storybook role, she wore her blonde curls in fluffy bang fashion with a thick braid around her head.

Miss Betty Cremen, Beth of "Little Women," had on a gown of white taffeta shot with gold made with huge puffed sleeves, a high neck and full skirt which terminated with a border of ruffles. Mrs. Neitah King was costumed in black crepe. Her gown is made on the new Tavern style with the uneven skirt of ruffles, the fitted bodice and more ruffles at the neck and on the sleeves.

Wears Bright Red Velvet.

Miss Louise Waller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Absolam Waller, wore a frock of bright red velvet which had a matching jacket trimmed with mink bands on the cape sleeves.

Miss Margaret McMullen was attired in black satin. Her gown was shioned on long lines with a ghtly rounded neck and shoulder aps of brilliants.

Miss Katherine Pearson had on a dinner gown of chartreuse crepe made with long sleeves and a high ck and was belted with a band brilliants. Miss Julia Koester as wearing a white crepe frock th a tailored jacket, the sleeves which were long and fitted.

Miss Silvine Clagett had on a wn of dark blue corded crepe ade on long lines with a high neck, which was finished with a narrow turn-over collar. Across the front of the throat there were three bright scarlet roses. Miss Margaret Speir was attired in powder-blue crepe made with jacket, which fastened with a rhinestone clip and had two small rhinestone buttons on each lapel.

Miss Betty Simpson wore a frock f black crepe, the sleeves of which ere slit above the elbow and lined ith jade green. The long flaring irt was faced at the hem with e same green. Her sister, Miss rances Simpson, was wearing a icket frock of black velvet made severe lines.

Senor Dr. Roa Soon to Leave Friends Here

Mexican Envoy to Return to Native Land, With His Popular Nieces.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Fernando Gonzalez Roa, will leave Washington shortly for Mexico City, leaving behind him many friends who regret the departure of the genial envoy, who is slated not to return to the Capital.

With the Ambassador will go his two young nieces, Senorita Dolores Chico Alatorre, and Senorita Sar Chico Alatorre, who have played a prominent part in the activities of the younger diplomatic set since their arrival in Washington last spring.

Rumor has it that the successor to Senor Roa is to be Mexico's Ambassador to Berlin, Senor Javier Senchez Mejorada. Senor Mejorada is one of the most distinguished men in Mexican public life. Besides being Ambassador to Germany, he has been Secretary of Communications, and president of the National Railways of Mexico. He was a close friend of the late United States Ambassador to Mexico, Mr. Dwight Morrow, and the bronze placque which today honors the memory of Mr. Morrow in Mexico City was the result of the efforts of Senor Mejorada.

If Senor Mejorada comes to Washington he will be the tallest man in the Diplomatic Corps, even towering above the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay. He also possesses great charm of manner and his popularity is enormous. He will be a great addition to Capital society, as will Senora de Mejorada, who is as charming as her husband.

Reception Follows.

An informal reception and breakfast followed the ceremony, when the couple were assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Clopton, mother of the bride, who was gowned in royal blue velvet with a velvet toque to match and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley; and Mrs. Donahue, mother of the bridegroom, who wore a black velvet gown and a small hat to match and shoulder corsage of orchids.

Mr. Donahue and his bride left later for a wedding trip, the latter traveling in an ensemble of brown wool with a satin blouse and a smart hat and accessories to match. Upon their return they will make their home at 2540 Massachusetts avenue.

The out-of-town guests at the wedding were Dr. and Mrs. Malvern B. Clopton, uncle and aunt of the bride; Mrs. Elkin L. Franklin and her daughter, Miss Helen Franklin, aunt and cousin of the bride, all of St. Louis, Mo.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

Wonders never cease! Here a week or so ago, Alice Price (Allie-Barre) and Nick Abbott were talking about music. Nick had some tune that was running around in his mind so he sat down and sang it to Allie-Barre. She liked it and together they sat down at the piano and she played it. Many things happened after that. Saturday evening the musical two and four of their friends were out at the Shoreham Terrace. During the intermission their friends, led by Aria Schwartz, urged them to play the "talked about song." So, Barney graciously agreeing, Allie-Barre sat herself down and played and sang "Rhapsody in Love" (that's the name and there are clever words too). Barney was near by and at the finish was, oh, so enthusiastic about it. Now it seems the piece has been copyrighted and is well on the road to success, judging from the reception so far.

Speaking of songs, Diary, it seems to me that the theme song of the Tacky Party should be "I Saw Stars." The invitations which Mrs. Dunlop has sent out are really too original and cute for words. They are of dark cadet blue cardboard with a sprinkling of small silver stars down one side. The necessary information about representing one's favorite screener, why, when and how, is all in silver and the whole business is addressed to the lucky ones in thick white ink.

Guild to Visit Historic Homes At Poolesville

St. Peter's Group Plans Trip Through Section on Saturday.

St. Peter's Guild, of Poolesville, Md., has arranged a tour of the beautiful historic homes in that section, to take place on Saturday. The tour will start at Mother's Delight, the lovely old home of Mr. Windolph at Dawsonville. Among the other houses to be visited is the first house built in Poolesville, in 1790. It was formerly used as a tavern and later housed the first postoffice in the town. It is now owned and occupied by Mrs. Fannie Morrison.

An especially interesting place is St. Peter's Church, built in 1848. Although the parish records go back to 1799, little is known of the original building.

Stephen Newton Chiswell came from England in 1735, when a very young lad. In 1796 he built what is now called Grayhaven Manor, using brick brought from England on a sailing vessel. The original hand-carved woodwork, handwrought iron hinges, massive chimneys and interesting windows may still be seen, and the date 1796 is burned into one of the bricks of the ivy-covered walls. Mrs. Beryl E. Gray now owns it.

Another fine old place filled with memories is Locust Grove, which is better known as Gott's Mill. In 1800 it passed into the possession of Mr. John L. Trundle, the grandfather of Mr. John S. Gott, who was the last of the family to own it and who sold it in 1917. Some changes have been made, but the secret passages and stairways are still intact.

Old-Fashioned Scent Recalls Golden Days

Sachet of Dried Petals and Leaves Imparts Lovely Fragrance.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE are few things that touch the chords of memory in an elderly man or woman as a scent suggestive of an old-fashioned garden. Even younger women are quick to recognize the subtle sweetness blended as it is with fragrant herbs.

A certain perfumer sought for a long time to find some way in which he could create a sachet that would embody the delightful odors of old plants and flowers. After numerous experiments he found that by taking the actual petals and leaves and drying them by an involved process he had what he wanted.

This sachet comes in packages with sufficient contents to be divided many times over. From the large package it is possible to make at least ten small ones to hang in closets, or to lend their charming fragrance to lingerie drawers and linen chests.

* * * *

Protection for Shoes.

A woman's wardrobe these days consists of so many hats and so many shoes to match the various suits and dresses that finding sufficient closet space for all of them becomes a problem. Leaving hats on closet shelves, or cramming shoes into shoe-bag pockets seldom keeps them in very good shape.

That is why a six-section shoe cabinet priced at $1.09 is one of the most popular items in the notion department of a local store. The small but compact piece of furniture, or miniature closet, as some have dubbed it, includes a small hose or lingerie drawer, a large hat drawer and then space for six pair of shoes.

Gentlemen on the Wrist.

"Dew-dad bracelets pep up any costume. College girls take to them on sight, and younger misses, too, find them impossible to resist.

They consist of a chain to which is attached a regiment of small-beaded gentlemen, not one of them over an inch long. Now, instead of wearing your heart on your sleeve, or scalps at your belt, dangle your miniature gentlemen from the wrist.

A Game a Day.

That eternal question, "What can I play, mamma?" has inspired a manufacturer of toys to collect an ensemble of games, one for each day in the week.

It's entitled "Seven days of play to make the hours gay." A great big box is divided into seven sections, and each section holds the game of the hour, or specifically, day. For Monday there's a jump rope. In other words, "Skip blue Monday away." For Tuesday there are garbs of colored beads for stringing. (String Tuesday along!) For Wednesday there's knitting; Thursday, lots of fluff for designing. Friday is taken care of with a bubble set; Saturday with a sewing set, and for Sunday there's painting.

It's truly a game which answers the child's question and a parent's prayer.

Two-in-One Gift.

A little orchid moire-covered sewing box looks attractive enough to cost $1 all by itself. But plus its contents, envelopes and writing paper, its quite a bargain for the price.

Two-in-one gifts of this kind are always in demand, so if you're looking for something somebody is sure to like, come down and see this.

Old-Time Knitting Bags.

"Hooked" knitting bags are not to be lightly passed by at their present price of 29 cents. Each bag is large enough to hold dozens of balls of yarn, besides scissors, needles and the suit, afghan, or work of art in question.

They're made of some kind of coarse material strung together in the old tiny "hook" fashion. Backgrounds for the most part are natural colored, and trimmings are in red, green, blue, lilac, pink or rose. Incidentally, they are easily washed.

Washing With Perfume.

Perfumed water softener comes in three-pound sacks and sells this week for 29 cents. A handful to the tub, or a pinch to the basin, takes the curse of hardness from the water and leaves it sufficiently soft to give a good sudsy lather to the soap.

Try using it in the water when you rinse out your lingerie. You'll find it's easier to wash and comes out with the fragrance of flowers.

Facial Tissue for a Year.

Immense packages of facial tissue, 9x10 inches in size, are reduced for the time being to 59 cents. Each package contains a thousand tissues, enough to last for a year at the rate of about three a day.

Long-Wear Brushes.

Imported toothbrushes and handbrushes, made from exceptionally durable composition and a high quality of bristles, cost slightly more than ordinary brushes—but they wear longer.

There are some which are striking combinations of black and white. Others are livelier in red, green, blue and orange. They are extremely ornamental for the guest bathroom.

Shirtwaist Dress Practical For the Daytime Wardrobe

Pattern No. 561

THE CLEVER and practical shirtwaist dress is a winner in any daytime wardrobe. The one shown would be good in a dark novelty crepe or in washable flannel.

The pattern is cut in sizes 32 to 42. Size 36, for the dress with long sleeves, requires 3¾ yards of 36-inch material and ½ yard for the kerchief. The pattern, accurately cut and easy to use, includes a clear and complete instruction chart.

They Tidy Up the Smokehouse.

There are lots of mistakes made in the world, and Blackie made his share when he first came to the Creek before he found out that he could get along a lot better if he would work his head well before he started his feet to moving. Nowadays, he sits out on the big roots of his house, and smokes and smokes, and looks like he is just loafing, but he isn't doing anything of the kind. The very best part of his work is done that way, for it is then that he lays out all of his plans for keeping his smokehouse filled. He has learned that he has to THINK out things before he can work them out. And he didn't make any mistakes when he took that long sleep, and told all the others to do the same thing, for there certainly was a busy week in front of him.

It was Monday morning, as you know, and Jocko and all the other boys were at Blackie's house, and they had been listening to the story Joe Reet was telling them about the plans of Mr. Man for killing his hogs. Jocko had said what he could do with one of those red chickens, if he ever got him on the table, and Billie Possum was saying what he thought of spare ribs and rutabegas. "But we will have to do some tall planning and some bigger working, if we get any of Mr. Man's pigs in the smokehouse," Dr. Coon said.

"Pigs, indeed! There's nothing piggy about them," Jocko said. "There was only one pig there, and I carried him to my house the other day. And he was every bit I could wag with. The others are sure enough hogs, and fat hogs, at that. They have been rooting around in that peanut and potato patch for weeks, and they are fat as they can be. No sir, I couldn't bring one of those big hogs over here, and so you will have to make some other sort of plans."

"Don't you worry about the plans or the size of the pigs," Blackie said. "I think I saw a plan today that is strong enough to move the hogs, no matter how big they are. I don't just know this minute how I am going to do it, but it HAS to be done, and I expect to smoke some moving plans out of this old pipe before supper time. It never in the world would do to let all that good pork and all those yellow yams and turnips and eggs and things get nearer to town than Cool Spring. Come on, everybody, and let's fix the smokehouse. I would hate to have a lot of nice fat hogs and chickens and things drive up to the door and ask for a place to sleep, and not have any place for them. It just wouldn't be neighborly."

"One thing at a time, and that done well" is a mighty good old saying, and that seems to be Blackie's way of doing things. Right now he had just one thing to do, and that was to make room in his smokehouse for a lot of winter supplies. Everybody was talking about putting up things for the winter, and he had just as well do like other folks. After he got the places for them all ready he could fix up his plans for filling them up. He had just heard where the fillings were, and he knew perfectly well that his old pipe would tell him how to get them.

Cooks Today Better Than In Old Times

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP).—Isabel Ely Lord, noted cooking expert, flouted tonight the sentimentalists who long for the old-fashioned cooking of their mothers.

"There has never been better home cooking in this country than there is today," she said.

"Remember the pies that mother used to bake on Saturday to last the week? Today women bake them to order.

"Remember the fried steaks? No one would think of frying a steak today. They broil them instead.

"Remember the home-made bread? There was always a heavy streak in it somewhere."

Miss Lord, with three other culinary specialists, had finished judging the entries in a culinary contest at the Women's Exposition of Arts and Industries, sponsored by the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Clubwomen in these contests have disproved the common belief that they can't be such good cooks because they spend so much time at their clubs," Said Miss Lord. "I think outside interests improve a cook, because she comes to her art with fresh inspiration.

"One thing women are learning today is the valuable lesson that decoration must be subordinate to the dish.

Bad Defense Against a Squeeze.

The squeeze play is usually not ready prepared and waiting only for the Declarer to lead out his high cards and take advantage of the fortunate position of the outstanding honors. In the great majority of cases there can be no squeeze until certain preliminary plays have established the true squeeze position. Sometimes the Declarer may prepare for the squeeze without his adversaries having any chance to prevent it. In other cases correct defense would thwart the Declarer's plan, and he must try to mislead his opponents as to the intention of his plays so that they will not suspect an impending squeeze and take means to make it impossible.

In the hand below South seemed to be attempting to tempt his adversaries to make a certain play, which they refused to do. Actually, his only chance lay in his opponents' not making this play. East and West succeeded only in allowing an ideal squeeze position to result.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

1—A minimum shaded one no-trump; North has the one-plus honor-trick that he needs and no more.

2—If North has as little as two Kings, South has an excellent chance to make four spades.

West opened the heart trey, which East won with the King. East shifted to the Jack of diamonds and South let him win the trick, trying to make his opponents think that he held more than one losing diamond. When East led a second diamond South won with the Ace and immediately played the Jack of hearts. West could not win this with the Queen for fear that the five of spades might be a hidden entry to Dummy, in which case a third heart lead would ruff out East's Ace and set up the heart Ten in Dummy for a discard. So West allowed East to win with his heart Ace. At this point, if East had shifted to a club, a squeeze would have been impossible because Dummy's only entry would have been forced out. But East thought it too dangerous to lead into a tenace, and continued with a diamond. South ruffed and ran the spade suit.

The fact that West held the only stopper in clubs and the only heart higher than Dummy's Ten now made it impossible for the game to be saved. By the time South had played out all his spades, West would be reduced to two cards. If he threw the heart Queen, it would establish Dummy's heart Ten; if he held the heart Queen and saved only one club, Dummy would win tricks with both the Ace and Jack. South therefore overcame the apparent necessity of losing a trick in clubs, gaining the several hundred points which a game was worth to him.

The fault in this hand was all East's. Though he had some reason to fear that South might hold the King and Ten of clubs, he should nevertheless have led fearlessly into Dummy's strong club holding. South's four-spade bid had practically guaranteed a solid suit, and East should have known that regardless of who held the club King, West would be unable to guard a club stopper and the Queen of hearts. If East had knocked out Dummy's Ace of clubs, the squeeze could not have worked because there would have been no entry to the Ten of hearts by the time West was forced to throw away his Queen.

Small Child Easily Taught to Keep Belongings in Order.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

TINY children love to put things in order. They learn where household articles belong and, if they're given a bit of encouragement, will make a practice of putting them away after they have been used.

Long before the toddler can talk, he can put away the dish pan and his bib; he will love struggling with the broom, to get it in its place in the pantry. He will derive keen enjoyment from picking up papers, match sticks, bits of fluff, and depositing them in the scrap basket. Letting him take care of such tasks will be no help to his mother; it would be less trouble for her to do them herself. But it is worth while because it contributes to his development; through it he learns to use head and hands.

When the baby has his first blocks, instead of giving him the box to upset, reverse the customary procedure. Turn the blocks out onto the floor and show him how to put them in, one by one.

Such methods, of course, will not train a child to be tidy by adult standards. There will come a time when he will lose all interest in being helpful about the house. But somehow I have the feeling that later yet they revert to habits instilled at an earlier age, and that no training is ever actually lost.

Hobbies Held Aid for Mind Development

Those of Women Shown at Arts, Industries Fair in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Oliver Harriman, who has made needlepoint for almost 40 years, believes all women should cultivate some hobby "to develop their minds."

A needlepoint chair seat, one of her many pieces, was among the exhibits of women's hobbies in the thirteenth annual Women's Exposition of Arts and Industries, which opened today. She also is chairman of the exposition.

Other entries in the booth were a collection of rare stamps, a group of old books on cosmetics, including a sixteenth century copy of an Italian work, "Adornment of the Ladies," and a perfume bottle collection of Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy. Among the latter was a crystal flask said to have belonged to the late Czar Nicholas of Russia.

Dolls and figurines were shown by two exhibitors. Miss Ethel H. Jones, of Scranton, Pa., who has over 350 National and character dolls, offered Henry VIII and Queen Elizabeth dolls, dressed in authentic costumes with paste jewels; also a half-inch doll from Wales, which she believes to be the smallest in the world.

Among the dolls of many lands exhibited by Miss Dorothy Gordon was a corn husk doll with corn silk hair from the Kentucky mountains.

Another exhibit was a collection of bells—an antique bell from an old American mansion, lamb and cow bells from Switzerland, an Egyptian bell and other foreign types. Old Dresden china, scrapbooks of poetry and handbraided tapestries were other hobbies on parade.

On this October 4 you may have to resort to tactful argument to persuade a man to comply with a request you may have to make. If you handle him very adroitly and create the impression that you are not trying to force the issue, you may succeed much better than if you try roughshod methods. In business affairs refrain from appearing overanxious regarding the outcome.

Some people you are likely to encounter on this date are apt to be rather abrupt. It might be wise to tell your part as briefly as possible, so as to terminate the conversation as quickly as possible. Advances of friendship probably may be made to you by a party you have never held in very high esteem. You will possibly find his friendship much better than his enmity, so it might be good judgment not to refuse it. On this date you may become reasonably sure of receiving some money very soon and this expectation should make you happy.

If you receive an invitation to a social affair and you go, be cautious not to neglect or ignore any other guest, especially if you have a partner assigned for you, for later on the resentment felt might be made manifest in a very costly manner. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking mates, should exercise care on this October 4 in their personal appearance and ought to refrain from an overindulgence in cosmetics, perfumes, or gaudy clothing.

If a woman, and October 4 is your natal day, you should possess excellent managerial ability. You are capable of directing others, so you should strive, if engaged in a commercial career, to qualify for a position which will enable you to display your ability.

Office detail operation should also afford unlimited opportunity for advancement. Married life need not interfere with your business career, providing your husband does not object. Matrimony should prove to be an ideal existence for one with your affectionate disposition.

If a man, and October 4 is your birthday, your love for excitement may lead you into pleasant as well as disagreeable adventures, unless you curb it. Your business capacity should gain you recognition in your chosen field of endeavor and your financial reward should be thoroughly satisfactory.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Sam Cresset, living in the London suburb of Sandywayes, has committed suicide, and a few nights later the lifeless body of Sir Julian Bott, famous financier, has been found in the vicinity. Mr. Huitt's opinions on the crimes are eagerly sought, since he was Cresson's banker, and had had dinner with Sir Julian at Lord Milhaven's home the night of his murder. Young Anthony Sarson is involved to some extent since he was known to have been near the scene of the latter crime; actually he stopped in the home of a mysterious Mme. de Sayal, but she pledged him to secrecy regarding that visit. Also adding a strange note is the intrusion of a chap named Tyssen, who seeks information saying that he wants material for a novel.

MR. HUITT'S presence in the club car at Sandywayes station on the following morning excited some surprise among his fellow passengers.

"Hello, Huitt!" Roland Martin exclaimed. "What are you doing here? I thought the inquest was this morning."

The bank manager explained the matter in his usual precise fashion.

"The inquest is purely a formal affair," he confided. "I was subpenaed, but as Lord Milhaven has also identified the body, the coroner has been good enough to excuse me. Lord Milhaven's identification is amply sufficient, and no other evidence is to be called. The police are asking for an adjournment for a week."

"Why do they want an adjournment?" Mr. Cresset demanded, his nervous fingers playing with his gray mustache. "It all seems simple enough."

"Shows you haven't been much interested, if you think that," Roland Martin declared. "I understand that as yet they haven't even traced the hired motorcar or the chauffeur whom Sir Julian rang up for. That leaves them without the slightest evidence as to how he came to be in the Wilderness at all. I haven't heard that the weapon's been discovered, either, and I should think that when they go thoroughly into the matter, they will have to call Mme. de Sayal."

Odd Situation.

"Mme. de Sayal," Timothy Sarson pointed out, "declares that she heard neither the car nor the sound of a shot. Seems odd, when you think how near the whole affair was to the bungalow. I should say that they'd certainly have to call her."

"Then they have no evidence yet as to the state of his mind and how he stood financially," Martin proceeded. "If I were one of the jury, I should want to know from his host, Lord Milhaven, and our friend Huitt here, how he behaved at dinner time, and I should certainly want some evidence as to the state of his affairs. Suicide may not be the popular theory, but it has to be taken into account."

"A man usually has pretty grave reasons for committing suicide," Timothy Sarson observed.

"I don't want to be a sensationalist," Roland Martin declared, "but I don't believe it was suicide at all. I believe that Sir Julian Bott was murdered."

Opinion Asked.

"What do you think, Huitt?" Timothy Sarson asked anxiously.

"I think," the bank manager pronounced, "that such matters are very much better not discussed until the police have had an opportunity of completing their inquiries."

"That's all very well academically, but one can't help discussing this particular one," Mr. Cresset objected. "If it was a case of murder, as you believe, then there's nothing for us holders of Julian Bott's stock to worry about. If it was suicide, we may be face to face with something sensational in the way of crashes. As a bank manager, Huitt, you must know what this means to your clients—after all we have been through, too."

"In plain words," Martin asked, "what do you think of the Julian Bott stock, the Windsor Trust and all the rest of it?"

"If you really want any information," Huitt replied stiffly, "drop in at the bank any time you like, Mr. Martin."

"I must say I rather approve of Huitt's point of view," Mr. Cresset intervened. "There is too much gabble in public places all the time about this sort of things."

Mr. Cresset broke into the conversation,

"I say, what do you fellows think about this man who's been sent down from Scotland Yard—Inspector Penny?" he asked.

"I should think he's sound," Timothy Sarson remarked.

"I happen to know that he's convinced it's a case of suicide."

"I hear he was up at Mme. de Sayal's putting her through it," Roland Martin announced. "Her ladyship wouldn't think much of that. She's as standoff as they make 'em. The last person in the world for a fellow like Penny to get on with."

Timothy Sarson shook open his paper.

Too Close for Comfort.

"Well," he said with an air of finality, "Julian Bott's suicide is an affair which we can consider outside our own orbit, even though it happened so close at hand. He didn't belong to our little circle and he was practically a stranger to all of us. It was simply coming so soon after poor Jesson's affair that gave us a bit of a shock. Now I hope we've finished and that we are going back to our quiet days. I used to think sometimes, coming down from town, that we were fortunate enough to live in one of the quietest and most retired spots on God's earth. Just lately everything seems wrong. You can read about suicides in the newspapers all right and sometimes almost enjoy a good murder, but I'm damned if I like the shadow of crime, the cold ghastliness of it, on my own doorstep."

Mr. Huitt nodded approval.

Roland Martin laid down his newspaper and glanced out of the window. There was no denying the fact that they were being badly jolted. Apparently the brakes had been put on suddenly and the train came to a standstill in a station the name of which was almost unknown to them. Martin let down the window.

"Hellsby Halt!" he exclaimed.

"I know where it is," Mr. Sarson observed, "but I never knew a train to stop here before."

A funny little station master came running officiously down the platform. He arrived outside the club car.

"Any gentleman here of the name of Mr. Timothy Sarson?" he demanded.

The wine merchant leaned forward.

"That," he announced "is my name."

The station master paused to wipe the sweat from his forehead.

"Will you kindly come along with me, sir?" he begged. "Quick as possible. I've had to flag the train by reason of a message from Sandywayes. If you'd be kind enough to hurry, sir, and might I ask you whether it's the truth that you're a director of the company?"

Tyssen Again.

Tall and imposing in dress and stature, Mr. Timothy Sarson stepped out onto the miserable little plank platform, on which he certainly presented a singularly inappropriate appearance.

"There's a young gent on a motor bicycle, sir. He's beat the train and a rare state of sweat and dust he's in. Will you kindly speak to him and get back into your seat. A doing like this has never happened before and I'm feared that I may have done wrong. This way, sir."

There was not even a shed attached to the bare planks at Hellsby Halt. Leaning against the paling by which he had clambered from the road was a tall, uncouth-looking man, disfigured by motoring acothy Sarson recognized him.

"Mr. Tyssen!" he exclaimed. "How on earth did you get here? What do you want?"

"A message from Anthony, sir," the young man pronounced, with the air of one who has only during the last few seconds recovered his breath. "He thought you ought to know. He was just off to Lewes—going to play cricket for the Gentlemen of Sussex against the M. C. C., when that fellow Penny came along."

"He stopped him?" Mr. Sarson gasped.

"He did, indeed, sir," Tyssen assented. "He warned Anthony that until further notice he was not to cross the railway line."

"My God!" Mr. Sarson murmured. "My son. Tell me, Tyssen. Speak out. Do you think they really believe that Anthony killed Sir Julian Bott?"

On Thin Ice.

"I wouldn't go so far as that," the young man replied, "but one has got to be brutal about this—there's no one else so likely. You know what the police are. They don't want to make an arrest too soon. On the other hand, they don't want to let any one they suspect out of their sight. I've a bit of experience of this, sir, from my story writing. If Anthony had been a regular criminal, they'd have framed something up on him and put him where he was safe for a week or so. They can't do that on Mr. Anthony, but they've put tabs on him, and if he won't stay where he's put they'll risk the arrest."

"What am I to do?" Timothy Sarson asked helplessly.

"He told me to try and catch you and let you know the situation. He didn't want to use the telephone there. What he thought was that you might get a good lawyer onto the job."

"You are very kind," the other declared. "I will send a lawyer down. I will return myself by the early train. Try and reassure Anthony. Unless I am very much deceived, he need have no fear."

The little station master absolutely dragged his passenger away and pushed him into the railway carriage. The guard, who had been waving his flag furiously, blew his whistle. The train started. Tyssen depressed the starting lever and, with a volume of foul smoke from his exhaust and a hideous noise, started on his return journey.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter, Glandular Fever.

WHILE the disease now known as glandular fever has no doubt existed for centuries, it is only within recent years that its individual character has been recognized. The condition occurs chiefly in children, although frequently contracted by adults. In the latter the duration of illness is more prolonged. The disease often appears in local epidemics.

While bacteriological examinations have disclosed no specific organism, yet most authorities agree that the disease is due to an infection, contagious in character, that stimulates the lymph tissue of the body. It is sometimes mistaken for mumps, acute lymphatic leukemia, influenza, typhoid fever, and other types of infection. Inasmuch as the tonsils nearly always show inflammation, it is possible that the infection gains entrance to the blood via the tonsils.

Glandular fever is recognized by the sudden onset of fever, prostration, and the enlargement of the lymph glands in the neck, under the arms, and occasionally in other parts of the body. In a recent epidemic many of the cases began with violent headache. This was first noticed over the forehead, gradually extending to the back of the head, with pain in the neck on movement. At times the pain was extremely severe. Delirium was noted in a few cases.

The rapid rise of temperature was quite characteristic, the fever reaching 103 to 104 degrees Fahrenheit and continuing at this height for as long as ten days. The temperature then fell to a range of 100 to 101 degrees Fahrenheit and remained at this level for a few weeks. The gland enlargements appeared as early as the second or third day in some of the children affected, but were delayed a week or more in many of the adult cases. Tenderness of the enlarged glands was quite general. In some cases the glands under the arms were larger than those in other parts of the body. In most instances the skin over the gland area was red and appeared inflamed.

A peculiar feature of the blood is the marked increase in the number of lymphocytes (lymph cells). This increase varies from 10,000 to 20,000 per cubic millimeter, and of the total number of white cells 70 to 85 per cent are lymphocytes. Research workers have shown that the blood of patients suffering from glandular fever has the property of clumping (massing together) the cells of the blood of sheep. In doubtful cases this is an excellent diagnostic guide.

Since no specific treatment is known, the management of the disease consists in good nursing and proper hygiene. When the temperature is high, sponging may be resorted to with much comfort to the patient. Arsenic and iron preparations have been used and are recommended. As soon as convalescence is well established the anemia which usually develops as a result of the disease must be promptly combated.

Practically all uncomplicated cases recover. The danger that attends the trouble is the possible onset of other infections due to the lowered resistance of the patient.

Health Work Abroad Done Best by Native

Wife of U. S. Minister to Panama Gives Views on Foreign Work.

THE MOST effective way to give other countries the advantage of our recently discovered health methods and our progressive ideas in education is to encourage foreigners to study here, believes Mrs. Antonio Gonzales, wife of the United States Minister to Panama.

"That is a much better arrangement than to send physicians, nurses and teachers to other countries to teach natives our way of doing things," she said yesterday at the Mayflower. Mrs. Gonzales is in Washington to attend the National Council of Catholic Women.

"And one of the reasons I arranged to take my vacation so I could be here for the council," she said, "is that I have hopes of obtaining scholarships for Panama girls to the National Catholic School of Social Service here in Washington."

Better Chance of Success.

A native physician or native nurse, trained in this country, has far greater success with native patients, Mrs. Gonzales pointed out, than does a citizen of the United States who goes to Panama to administer aid to the sick.

"It isn't so much that Panamanians have more faith in their own countrymen," she explained, "but that the native physician understands just how far he can go in ordering his patients to follow a special diet, or to stay in bed, or to take such-and-such a medicine.

"He understands the background against which he has to work. He has an innate comprehension of his patient's needs and knows, therefore, how to prescribe the type of treatment to which the patient will most readily respond.

"The same principle applies in the case of nurses. The Henry Street plan, so efficiently followed in the United States, is gaining a foothold in Panama. Native nurses, using the same methods we do in in this country, go into the homes and care for the sick much more effectively than foreign nurses with the same training could possibly do."

Made Many Visits.

It would seem Mrs. Gonzales should have an excellent understanding of what natives of Panama need. In the year she has been there she has visited every city, every village, every school and every other type of institution.

"I really wanted to know the people of Panama," she explained, "and I realized I could never know them unless I went out to their homes and their institutions and got acquainted with them there."

Mrs. Gonzales mentioned that her religion was the strongest bond between her and the natives of Panama. Another bond is that she knows their language, having learned it during the 23 years she did social welfare work in New York.

"And since my husband has a Spanish name, that has helped too," she added.

Mr. Gonzales was born in Cuba but is a citizen of the United States. A prominent lawyer, he has long been regarded as an outstanding authority on Latin-American affairs.

Perhaps his being a lawyer is partially responsible for his wife's deciding, after having been married 12 years, to become a lawyer, too.

After she had finished the law course at Fordham University she was awarded the degree of doctor of laws from that institution, the fourth woman ever to be so honored.

Later, she became assistant district attorney in New York.

Right Powder Will Do Much To Aid Beauty

By Frances Mangum.

NOT HALF so many skins are as sallow as they seem, nor are faces as anemic as they appear. The trouble lies in the powder.

It is lamentable that with all the excellent and perfectly blended powders available today a large number of women still choose blindly. Some of them do not take into account that their coloring is generally darker in summer than winter, and that in the fall, when it is turning lighter, they must find a powder that neither gives a tan nor a pallor. Those who do realize this frequently choose a blush shade because it seems to be "medium." They do not take into account that possibly their skin has no pink undertone and this shade is antagonistic to their natural color.

Powder is one of the fundamentals of make-up and must be chosen wisely if it is to flatter the skin as it should. To make a wise choice it is first of all necessary to study the skin devoid of make-up and to select a shade which is very little lighter—never darker.

In choosing a light powder beware of one that gives an unnatural paleness. Nothing is worse than to see a woman with a ghost-like whiteness. A very light powder may either have a pinkish tinge or ivory. Try both and see which blends with your skin. As a general thing a blonde can wear pinkish powders, a brunette ivories, but generalities are not to be accepted. You must test the powder and see what your individual requirements are.

The third consideration is of the powder itself. A cheap powder is poor economy. If it is coarse and of questionable quality it will seep into the pores, tend to enlarge them and is likely to cause blackheads. By all means use a good powder.

Creative Urges Aided At Unique Workshop

Westchester County Institution Brings Joy to Rich and Poor in Times of Trouble, Through Varied Activities.

PROVIDING OPPORTUNITIES for people to release their creative urges is the work of Mrs. Chester G. Marsh, of White Plains, N. Y., a short woman with a massive head, capped with a shock of bobbed, gray hair, who is in Washington attending the Twentieth National Recreation Congress at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Marsh is the director of the famous Westchester County Workshop, which is doing pioneer work in the field of recreation by stimulating an interest in drama, music and the arts. To her recreational center come people from all walks of life to learn how to paint, make pottery, weave tapestries, to write, to sculpture and to do dozens of other creative, artistic things. A butler may cast his statue in the kiln with the statue of a millionaire.

"We create in our workship chiefly for the joy of creating," Mrs. Marsh declared yesterday afternoon, her bright blue eyes shining with enthusiasm. "In this country we have had the notion that a person shouldn't paint unless he can excell at it; but that is ridiculous. We don't say a person shouldn't play tennis because she can't be a Helen Wills. People should paint, not for the money or fame that might be in it, but for the pure joy of painting. Or if they have an urge to make pottery, they should make pottery simply for the thrill of creating beautiful things.

Art for Everybody.

"The arts should not be set aside for the talented few; they should be for everybody."

The workshop, by opening doors and windows into new spheres of activity, has tided many a man and woman through the depression, its director declared. Many business men who suffered great financial losses have turned to the workshop to occupy their minds and have become so interested in painting or sculpturing or dramatics that they have weathered great mental strains. One big corporation lawyer came into the sculpture class and is now doing excellent work. He has made a marvelous Negro head, Mrs. Marsh stated.

One woman who had been exceedingly wealthy came to the workshop when she could no longer afford country clubs and more expensive recreations and began making pottery. And she became so enthralled with her pottery making that she announced one day, "I am glad I lost all my money. If I had not, I would have never known that I had the ability to do this thing. It means more to me than money."

Varied Interests Shown.

Women—rich and poor—find varied interests in the workshop. Three generations of one family are in the painting class—the mother, daughter and grandmother. One woman has made a whole dinner set of pewter. Working girls come in at night to do woodwork. Some of them have made ping-pong tables, some of them have remodeled their furniture and done over their rooms.

"One day I saw a girl coming in with a man who had a great big old chiffonier on his back," Mrs. Marsh recorded, smiling at the recollection. "I asked her what she was going to do with it and she said she was going to saw it down and make a bookcase.

There are large classes in weaving. The workshop has 31 looms and women and girls, according to Mrs. Marsh, "are learning to make perfectly beautiful taspestries, bed spreads and rugs." Then, in the sewing classes, the women are taught to make their own clothes. This past summer between 12 and 18 girls, getting ready to go to college this fall, made tailored tweed suits, sport clothes and evening dresses.

Though there are more women and girls enrolled in the classes of the workshop than men, the number of men is astonishing. Dentists, lawyers, doctors, gardeners and men from all professions and other occupations are enrolled in the pottery, sculpturing and painting classes. "There is an enormous number of men interested in pottery," Mrs. Marsh said.

This workshop, which has been pronounced the only one of its kind in the world, has been established for four years. It occupies a large basement underneath the community house. With no partitions separating them, classes are carried on in cartooning, ceramics, art, basketry, designing, etching and wood block printing, knitting, leather craft, metal craft, photography, showcard lettering, toy repairing and 19 other subjects.

"Five Ring Circus."

"It is like a five-ring circus," the director declared with a soft laugh. "The sculpture group slips into the art group and the art group melts into the cartooning group. They catch fire from one another."

The workshop has a permanent staff of four workers and 21 special teachers. One of the best artists in New York comes out and teaches painting; one of the best etchers offers his services to the etching group and so on through all of the 31 subjects that are offered. Last year 1,995 people were enrolled in the classes and there was an attendance of over 16,000.

"We invite people to come and ask for whatever they want to learn," the director explained. "We glibly say we will teach whatever anybody wants to know; but one time a woman called our hand. She wanted to know how to skin a chipmunk."

The workshop is a department of the Westchester County Recreation Commission. The commission is composed of five prominent women who direct all the recreation for Westchester County.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have a daughter who is going to have a birthday soon. She will be 8 years old and I want to have a birthday party. Will you please tell me just how to plan it? Should I let her know about everything or not? And should I let her have my birthday gift to her before or after the party? Thanking you for any suggestions, I am,

JANET.

Planning Child's Party.

DEAR JANET: In giving a birthday party for an 8-year-old girl, I believe she derives a great deal more enjoyment from the occasion if she has the added pleasure of anticipation. Take her into your plans.

Give her the family gift the morning of her birthday, so she will have it to show her friends at the time of the party. If the party is to be given on a school day, ask the children from 3:30 to 5:30; on another day, from 3 until 5, in the afternoon.

* * * *

Plan a program of games, and some simple refreshments. The latter may include a birthday cake, not too rich, with eight candles; or better yet, little individual cup cakes, iced, with a tiny candle on top of each. It's very smart to serve gingerbread in place of cake at children's parties, and the drink might be milk, cocoa or orange or lemonade. If you want to add something to the cake and the drink, it might be gelatin or jello in individual molds, or ice cream.

* * * *

Mothers are learning that children's parties "go" more successfully if refreshments are served shortly after the party begins, rather than near the close.

* * * *

By reversing the old-time procedure in children's parties—when the refreshments came as a tediously postponed anticlimax—yours might begin with ushering the children, shortly after arrival and greeting, into the dining room, where a "Jack Horner pie" awaited them in the center of the table. It need not be elaborate. Just a big saucepan or preserving kettle covered with crepe paper, with a string for each child drawn through a hole in the frilly cover. The children may take their places, and, at the word, "Pull," draw a favor from the "pie." These may be odd-shaped paper caps, noisemakers, or some inexpensive trinket.

* * * *

Then serve the refreshments, and as the last plate is scraped clean, announce the first game on the afternoon program. "Pin the tail on the donkey" is always popular, and has many variations. Supplies can be found in the 10-cent stores.

Obstacle races are entertaining. Line up the children and make each carry a large potato around the room on a teaspoon; next, three grains of rice on a knife blade; and, third, a tin pie plate atop the head. He who covers the most distance without losing the burden is the prize winner in each event.

* * * *

"Marching to Jerusalem" is more sure-fire fun. Chairs are lined up in a twin row, back to back, with one less chair than there are children. Then, to victrola, radio or piano music—or even to rhythmic chanting—the children march around the row of chairs in single file. The music stops suddenly and the children scramble for seats. He who gets left is out of the game. Another chair is withdrawn, and the game goes on, until all contenders are eliminated. The last chair-grabber gets the prize.

* * * *

As a concluding feature, there is the "spider web." It's a game of treasure hunt. Use a long strand of cord for each guest. To the starting end—which is to be put in the guest's hand—tie a peanut. Weave the cord under the radiator, over a picture, behind a chair, anywhere, so it leads a merry chase to the prize at the end. Half-dozen or a dozen such cords, interwoven about a room or home, make a tantalizing spider's web, and give a rousing send-off to an afternoon's play. The web, of course, must have been arranged before the party starts.

Music Appreciation Natural in Children

Many Do Not Care for It Because They Regard It as Work Instead of as a Means of Pleasure, Specialist Declares.

THE CHILD who declares he hates music has received the wrong musical training, for it is as natural for a child to love music as it for him to love beauty.

This is the sincere belief of Mrs. Evelyn Fletcher Capp, specialist in the education of child musicians, and founder of the Fletcher method of musical training.

"Never has there been a greater need for music than there is today," Mrs. Capp said yesterday. "In this machine age everyone needs some means of expressing his thoughts and emotions, and everyone needs the peace and harmony that only music can give.

"But parents today are too intelligent to want their children to spend years of study just learning to be poll parrots and imitators; they want their children to learn to use their music as a means of self-expression."

Must Arouse Desire.

The first step in teaching a child to appreciate good music is to arouse in him an honest desire to learn it, Mrs. Capp believes.

"Children don't like music because they think of it as work," she explained. "If a child is taught to think of his music as a form of play he will be eager to learn.

"In the Fletcher method we teach children through play. For instance, we have a keyboard that comes apart. The children play at taking it apart and putting it together again. In this way they learn the keyboard thoroughly, but it is fun for them, not drudgery. They play store with the chords, buy and sell them to each other. When they have bought the chords they go to the piano and play them over. Thus all the technical parts that make music tiresome and uninteresting to the child are taught in a vital and interesting manner.

"And the parent of a child taught in this fashion has no practice problems. Often children fight over who shall have the piano. I know one father who had to buy two pianos because his daughters were continually quarreling over who should have it."

The trouble with most piano practicing is that it is "unpracticing," Mrs. Capp said.

When children are made to practice they play with their hands, but their thoughts are somewhere far off; they will play a piece over and over again, and play it wrong, and they are worse off than if they had not practiced at all."

Mrs. Capp believes that once a child has a thorough knowledge of the technicalities of music, and an appreciation of music, he can find the rhythm that expresses his thoughts and needs.

"Let the child get the modern slant on rhythm that is called jazz," she said. "If he wants to jazz up Beethoven, let him. It will only give him a greater appreciation of the classics."

The antagonism to method on the "part of people who should know better," is largely responsible for the prevalent lack of musical knowledge, says Mrs. Capp.

"Method means an outline, a definitely tested plan, a mode of procedure, and it is ridiculous to start out to learn music with no method.

"The teaching of music can be just as scientific and exact as the teaching of mathematics. The result will not be mechanical and soulless.

"Music should be a means of bringing all people together," she said, "it develops in people and appreciation of truth and beauty, and gives them an inner strength that will stand by in the times of greatest need!"

Mrs. Capp will give a course in the Fletcher method at the King-Smith Studios this winter.

Strictly Speaking

What About These?

1. What is the present name of the city formerly known as Constantinople?

2. What is the preferable pronunciation of epoch?

3. What is the derivation of the italicized word in this: "The primmest bluestocking could not object to what remains of Mae West's current picture."

4. Is mown still used as the past participle of the verb mow?

5. Who was John Huss?

Answers Here.

1. Istanbul, called EE-stahn-bool.

2. EP-ok is preferable but EE-pok is also correct.

3. "Bluestocking" is used here in the figurative sense. The term was first applied to certain London ladies who wore blue stockings and met, about 1750, in plain dress for literary entertainments.

4. It is still used but is rapidly being replaced by mowed.

5. He was a Bohemian religious reformer. The Anglicized pronunciation rhymes with "thus." The German, with "loose."

Family Life Rules Reich Women Folk

(This is the third of a series of six daily articles in which foreign bureaus of the Associated Press describe the status of feminism in many lands.)

BERLIN, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Nazis believe it is a man's world and German women, never ardent feminists in the Anglo-Saxon sense of the phrase, for the most part make little protest. Some feminine voices, however, are raised in disagreement. The Nazis have chpered these disputant voices—and then have gone ahead blithely circumscribing women's sphere as kinder, kueche und kirche (children, kitchen and church).

In their restricted field the fraulein and the frau have labored with a new enthusiasm. And sports provide an increasing outlet for feminine expression.

Seek Improved Methods.

Limitation to the traditional work of women has restricted them to an intensive application to it. They seek avidly for improved methods of rearing children, preparing food, buying wisely and becoming more congenial companions to their families. Eugenics and child psychology are being investigated studiously.

Thoroughly imbued with Nazism, German women for the most part yield gracefully to the deman s made upon them. They seem to be happy, and promote with vigor the conception that true feminism consists in being "womanly women."

Women approve Hitler's project of making possible the marriage of 300,000 girls this year through economic inducements, and his plan for subsidies for large families.

Stresses Eugenics.

In achieving this last point the German woman has a big job. She skimps on certain products to help cut down imports. She takes into her home a girl who wants to learn housekeeping. She is guardian of the family tree, and stresses to her boys and girls the importance of eugenics.

She encourages the "back to the farm" movement to cut down unemployment, and takes the children to church while the storm trooper husband and father is out marching. As a big treat, she accompanies her uniformed husband, boy and girl to a stirring Nazi mass meeting, where she sits very still while a Nazi mogul issues another list of commandments.

Security Lost in Austria.

Vienna (AP).—Postwar Austrian women were presented with all the rights for which women of other nations struggled, but the thing women prize most, security, was taken away from them.

Today women of Austria live in dread of another civil war, after experiencing two within half a year. Socialist women joined the fighting last February, and then and in the revolt last July women were killed.

The chief anxiety of women today is for husbands and grown sons belonging to armed organizations. There is hardly a woman in Austria without a relative in the regular or auxiliary forces of the government, or pledged to support some fighting faction.

Eskimos Shun Modern Ways And Are Happy

Mme. Minister Visited 14 Villages. Found Nothing But Grandeur.

By Malvina Lindsay.

HEARING RUTH BRYAN OWEN, Minister to Denmark, speak of Greenland, one immediately sees icebergs shimmering in green and coral lights and feels the enveloping solitude of the North and the gentle peace of Eskimo villages. One also experiences the doubt, "What price civilization?"

Mrs. Owen is a guest at the White House on a brief visit during her annual leave from her diplomatic post in Copenhagen. She told yesterday how Greenland, both through its physical beauty and its Arcadian village life, weaves a spell around its visitors.

In her 2,000-mile coast tour of the 14 Danish villages in Greenland, which she made as part of her diplomatic duties, she was overwhelmed first by the strange beauty she encountered. Sailing into ports she would see cathedrals of ice, then a great ice amphitheater, then what seemed mammoth flowers with icy petals, then icebergs streaked with green—frozen sunlight—and ice fields, high-lighted in rainbow tints.

Untainted by Modern Life.

Later she came to know the Eskimo villagers and learned of the peace and beauty of a civilization untainted by the machine or by economic strivings.

Under the watchful maternal guardianship of Denmark, the Eskimos of Greenland have been kept uncontaminated by the devices of modern living. The villages are closed to tourists. Only scientists and persons who have special consent of the Danish government may visit Greenland. Only staples of food are permitted to be sent into the village stores from the outside world. The only automobile in the entire north of Greenland is a truck used for government work. The natives have never seen a movie nor an electrical labor-saving gadget. They know none of the luxuries of house furnishings nor the competition of dress. There is no keeping up with the Joneses.

The result—an almost idyllic life of contentment and friendliness, reports Mrs. Owen.

"I have never seen such a contented people," she said. "There is no crime in Greenland. In the whole of north Greenland there were only three thefts last year. There are no jails. The people live quiet, gentle lives at peace with themselves and their neighbors."

No ambitions or frustrations disturb the Eskimo women of Greenland, according to Mrs. Owen. Neurotics are unknown. The housewife spends her time preparing the simple foods for her family and dressing skins and preparing them for garments.

No commercial amusements prevail and none are needed, for boredom does not exist in an Eskimo village. When the villagers want "a good time" they gather together, sing and dance and play the concertina. Their artistic longings find expression in their handicrafts.

This kind of life has developed in the Eskimo a character free from suspicion and selfishness, Mrs. Owen found. The gentle trust and friendliness of the people is her happiest memory of Greenland — happier even than the haunting vision of ice-capped mountains.

"One of the things I could not forget was the children," she said. "All the way home on the boat I saw them waving farewell to me from the rocks above the seacoast villages. I tried to put them out of my mind. I would say to myself, 'These are not your children,' but I could not forget them."

Sends Toys to Them.

Because the memory was so vivid, Mrs. Owen, on reaching New York, went on a toy-shopping spree. Many boxes of bright toys were dispatched toward the Greenland villages. By Christmas the small Eskimos will receive these gifts, which will help to lighten their long, dark winter.

However, even without the toys they would be happy. Mrs. Owen is sure of that. Never a complaint of cold or of the approach of the long winter night is voiced in an Eskimo home. No other life is known there, hence none is longed for.

Serving as godmother to an Eskimo baby was one of Mrs. Owen's happiest experiences on her trip. The white blouse of her black knit suit was pinned at the throat yesterday with a carved sea gull made from walrus tusk, a gift from the mother of the Eskimo baby who bears the name of Ruth.

In each village in Greenland is a school, church and hospital, and Mrs. Owen visited most of these institutions in her journey up the coast. In one hospital was a new baby—a girl.

"Of course, I was making a fuss over the baby as any woman would," she said. "It was pretty as a rosebud. The mother was greatly pleased and later a doctor on the boat told me the mother would like to name the baby for me.

"The Eskimos have the feeling that a lot of the spirit of a person passes into another with the bestowal of a name, and that there is a lasting bond between the two persons bearing the name. So I felt deeply honored.

"A month later I came back down the coast to the village. On the ship I received a note saying 'When will Ruth be ready to come to the christening?'

Mrs. Owen, in conformance with custom, carried the baby from its home down the mountain side to the little Lutheran church for the christening. The mother, attired in sealskin trousers and high boots, walked beside her. After the ceremony, Mrs. Owen was instructed by the minister in her duties as godmother. Fortunately, by now she knows Danish and was able to get the full import of her responsibilities.

There were five games in the 1905 world series and every one of them was a shut-out—but stranger than this record is the record set by Christy (Big Six) Mathewson of the New York Giants. He pitched three of the games against the Philadelphia Athletics, and won three straight shut-out victories.

He was one of the greatest—many fans say the greatest—pitchers in big league ball. He had a .663 percentage in 17 seasons, with 372 wins and 189 defeats. He won 30 or more games three years in a row, and 20 or more 12 successive seasons.

Strange as it seems, in 18 years of baseball Matty never pitched a Sunday game—it was against his principles.

• • • •

The Chicago White Sox of 1906, famous as baseball's "hitless wonders," won the American League pennant with an all-time low batting average of .228 for a pennant winner. Their opponents in the series were the Chicago Cubs, who finished the season with a modern record for games won—116 out of 150, a percentage of .763. The "hitless wonders" continued to be wonders and continued to be hitless in the series—winning the world's championship, four games to two, and with a batting average of .197.

Queen Anne was the last English ruler of the house of Stuart, but she was the first ruler of Great Britain. She began her reign in 1702 as queen of England and Scotland as separate kingdoms, but in 1707 they were united under the name of Great Britain.

Hermitage Bid For Roosevelt

Byrns Will Ask President to Visit Home of Andrew Jackson.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, House Democratic leader, will call at the White House today or tomorrow personally to invite the President to visit the Hermitage, historic home of Andrew Jackson, near Nashville, Tenn.

The invitation first was extended by Byrns and tentatively accepted several months ago, in behalf of the Ladies Hermitage Association. The program calls for the President stopping over in Nashville en route to Warm Springs some time in November. He will be asked to take breakfast at the famous Jackson retreat.

If a tentative schedule is followed, Mr. Roosevelt will inspect such Tennessee Valley projects as the Norris Dam, near Nashville, and the Joe Wheeler Dam, near Chattanooga. On October 19 he will dedicate a veterans' hospital in Roanoke, Va., proceeding the following day to Williamsburg. He expects to make another short trip to his Hyde Park home before leaving for Warm Springs.

Clews Lacking In Officer Hunt

Retired Army Colonel Who Vanished in Denver Gone 4 Days.

Denver, Oct. 3 (AP).—A systematic police search today had uncovered only faint clews in the disappearance of Lieut. Col. Isaac E. Titus, 53, retired Army officer from Fort Bliss, Tex., who vanished here Saturday night.

Patrolmen Elmer Young and F. M. Writer informed Detective Capt. Roy Mack they had been called to a filling station in North Denver Sunday afternoon on a report of a suspicious character.

They questioned a man who showed them a card bearing Col. Titus' name and title and told them he was staying at a cottage camp.

The officers said they called a cab and saw the Army officer drive off in the machine. He appeared "a bit dazed" the policemen said.

After Col. Titus' wife reported him missing yesterday, the officers located the cab driver and he said the officer requested to be let out on a business street in the lower section of the city. That was the last trace police have been able to obtain of him.

Col. Titus and his wife arrived here Friday night en route to Batavia, Ohio.

Mrs. Titus said her husband suffered a head injury and a broken collar bone when he fell in a hotel recently.

"Why don't you tell women smokers more about Old Gold's throat-ease?"

[AN OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1932]

Dear Miss Colbert:—

Old Gold's story is indeed an important story for women. But we cannot tell it nearly so well as Old Gold tells it for itself!

The woman who smokes Old Gold experiences for herself the coolness, the smoothness, the friendly throat-ease of this truly different cigarette. She discovers, too, that in its freedom from oily, artificial flavoring, Old Gold is a cleaner, as well as a smoother, smoke . . . leaving no objectionable odor in fabrics or on the breath.

We repeat, Old Gold's story is indeed an important story for women. But we cannot tell it nearly so well as Old Gold tells it for itself!

College Men Hear Appeal For Equality

Aid for Individual Asked by Dr. Graham at U. of Virginia.

Honor Certificates Given to 39 Students at Opening Program.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 3.—Upholding the rights of the individual against the "social control of vested interests and financial power," President Frank P. Graham, of the University of North Carolina, today urged college men to join the movement in behalf of the "forgotten man," in an address at the University of Virginia's convocation exercises formally opening the 111th session.

"At this shrine of Thomas Jefferson," Dr. Graham said, "we can not as university men stand aside while the shibboleths, which came flaming from his soul in behalf of the liberties in the eighteenth century, are all over America turned against the liberties of forgotten men in the twentieth century."

Dr. Graham declared that "the liberties and rights of lowly human beings in this democratic tradition are surely no less American than the liberties and rights of vested interests and corporate power."

"American democracy," he said, "which leads the world in the development of a world-wide ministry to human needs through the great corporation, and which has fallen too much under the sway of financial power, must now save itself and avoid the ways of Fascist or Communist dictatorship through the American ways of social control in behalf of the work, life, liberty and happiness of all people."

Dr. Newcomb Presides.

President John Lloyd Newcomb, of the University of Virginia, presided at the exercises attended by members of the board of visitors, the faculty and student body, and awarded certificates of intermediate honors to 39 students who attained distinguished scholastic grades in their first two years in the university.

In greeting the faculty members and students, Dr. Newcomb announced the enrollment figures and predicted a total registration of more than 2,400 for the entire year, representing an increase over last year. Dr. Newcomb expressed satisfaction over the 10 per cent increase in new students for this session.

In his address, President Graham referred to the acceptance by both sides of the Winant report on the textile dispute, and declared that the "youth in the colleges and universities would take their stand for human understanding and against class hatreds; for intelligence and conference rather than unreason and war in industry; for the majority vote of workers as expressing the wishes of the workers in a plant or industry as fairly as the majority stock vote of stockholders expressed the wishes of the owners; that the judgment of lawlessness shall include the killing of unarmed strikers not less than the intimidations of nonstrikers by flying squadrons, and that the damage to property shall never become more heinous than the damage to human beings."

Dr. Graham characterized the present period as a "critical hour in the South and in America," and described industrial organization as the "fifth advance of democracy." He declared that "the youth in the universities would welcome unafraid the rise of democracy to organize human beings—already organized around their religious, political, intellectual and commercial interests—around the human and spiritual interests of the working life for a better chance for themselves and their children."

O. C. Munch Named Head Of Pythians

Virginia Grand Lodge Selects Norfolk for 1935 Meeting.

Sisters of Order Will Elect New Officers Today.

Staunton, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Oliver C. Munch, of Carmel, Shenandoah County, this afternoon was elected grand chancellor of the Virginia Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, as the organization reached the halfway mark in the business deliberations of its sixty-sixth annual convention here.

Norfolk was chosen the 1935 convention city. The grand lodge at that time will dedicate the Newcastle Hall, being erected by Charity Lodge, No. 1.

Other officers are Stokes Grey, Roanoke, grand vice chancellor; Harold T. Ballard, Fredericksburg, grand prelate; W. W. MacNichols, Newport News, grand master at arms; Fred H. Wright, Petersburg, grand inner guard; Charles E. Fretwell, Staunton, grand outer guard. George C. Cabell and A. A. Fisher, both of Norfolk, were reelected grand keeper of records and seal and grand master of the exchequer, respectively.

John D. Roberts, of Cape Charles, presiding as grand chancellor, automatically becomes past grand chancellor. Election as outer guard places Mr. Fretwell in line for the highest office in the gift of Virginia Pythians, that of grand chancellor, which he should reach in five years after passing through the intervening chairs.

Charles D. Fox, Roanoke, and James T. Bailey, Richmond, are holdovers as supreme representatives, as are Grand Trustees S. B. Hammer, Lynchburg, and H. B. Gilliam, Petersburg. C. L. Tyler, Portsmouth, was reelected grand trustee for a three-year term.

Don C. Hancock, Richmond, was reelected for a five-year term on the board of governors of the Pythian children's home at New Market.

The Virginia Pythian Sisters' Grand Temple also is meeting here, with Mrs. Kathryn L. West, of Portsmouth, presiding as grand chief. The Sisters elect officers tomorrow.

Youth Called 'Party' Killer By Officers

Walter Berry, 21, Faces Formal Charges in Harrisonburg.

First Murder Mystery in Two Decades Settled, Police Declare.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Walter Berry, 21, of Harrisonburg, tonight was charged with the murder of Gleaves Calhoun, 27, here early Sunday morning, and police declared they believe they have solved the first mystery to confront them in two decades.

The warrant was issued by Trial Justice Hamilton Haas, and was read to the prisoner in jail this afternoon. Berry was arrested while at work on a school building at Keezletown.

All except 3 of the 14 persons held in jail in connection with the shooting were released today. Two are held as material witnesses, Glenn Smith, who said he saw Calhoun shot, but could not identify the gunman, and Miss Arlene Lam, who said Berry was in the automobile parked at the curb from which the two fatal shots were fired.

Police say that Berry was jealous of attentions paid Arlene Lam, sister of Mrs. Kirby Lam with whom he had been friendly. Berry and Calhoun were both at the party at the home of Mrs. Lam. It was in front of the house that the shooting occurred. Police learned that Berry left the house before Calhoun.

Smith says he heard some one tell Calhoun he was going to shoot him and Calhoun told him to shoot. Then two shots were fired.

Police said Berry had recently completed a six-month jail term for shooting into the windshield of an automobile because the driver would not give him parking space. As a minor, he served a term in the State reformatory. Police said he nearly always carried a gun, Sheriff Charles R. Fawley taking an automatic from him several days ago. The officers said Berry has a small collection of guns at his home, but they have been unable to locate the .25-caliber automatic from which the fatal shots were fired.

Old Rate Kept At Salisbury

Municipal Tax Levy Stays at $.85 Per $100; Assessables Up.

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—The Salisbury Mayor and council yesterday fixed 85 cents per $100 as the municipal tax rate for the next fiscal year. This is a continuation of the present rate, although the assessable value has increased $1,000,000. It is the lowest rate since 1929.

The increase in assessables is largely in ownership of corporation stocks, the total being $14,000,000.

Budget requirements were placed at $130,000, the same as last year. The largest increase of any item was in the fire department, up $6,000, to take care of apparatus replacements.

It is estimated the tax levy will produce $105,000 and the additional funds will be derived from licenses, fines and other sources.

County 'Duchesses' At Baltimore Fete

23 Begin Arriving With Retinues to Take Part in Tercentenary of Maryland Celebration at Stadium Tomorrow and Saturday.

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—"Duchesses" of the counties of Maryland—23 of them—began arriving in Baltimore today, with their retinues, ready to take part in Baltimore's celebration of the Tercentenary of Maryland at the Municipal Stadium Friday and Saturday evenings.

By tomorrow all the "duchesses" will be in the city, and a dress rehearsal will be held in the afternoon at the stadium.

On Friday a full round of activities for the girls will get under way. Stores will give them luncheons and parties, city officials will greet them and there will be fashion shows. As a climax, they will make two public appearances as representatives of their county in the pageant.

About 3,000 persons will take part in the fete. Eight miles of electric wiring have been installed at the stadium, costumes are ready, and the actors are on the eve of their final rehearsal.

Each county "duchess," when she appears on the stage at the pageant to be welcomed by Lady Baltimore, impersonated by Miss Octavia Chatard, will wear a dress of the mode prevailing when the county she represents was admitted into Maryland. Each will be attended by pages and maids of honor from her home county, and will be borne about the pageant grounds in palanquins. Each "duchess" will be presented with a silver key to Baltimore by Mayor Jackson.

School Ouster May Go Before State Officials

Charles County Residents Demand Retention of Principal Bishop.

La Plata, Md., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—The Maryland State board of education may be requested to determine whether J. M. Bishop will continue as principal of the Glasva High School, Charles County, it appeared today.

Indications that the State board would be requested to act appeared after a committee of seven, named at a mass meeting of school patrons, members of the Parent-Teacher Association and taxpayers, asked Senator Walter Mitchell, attorney for Bishop, to arrange for placing the controversy before the State board and Gov. Ritchie.

Members of the committee, Washington Bowling, Frank Bowling, Chester Long, Archie Wingate, Mrs. Thomas I. Farr, Jack Lomax and Herman Darner, told Mitchell they would accompany him in putting the matter before the State authorities.

They asserted that the patrons of the school were not in accord with County Superintendent F. Bernard Gwynn and the county board, headed by Mrs. Bernard Howard, in dismissing Bishop, who had been principal at Glasva for four years.

Although asked by Gwynn in August to resign, Bishop was not actually dismissed as principal until last Wednesday. At a hearing on that date the board discharged him for what it termed "willful neglect of duty," which later was explained as failure to open the school on the date set for beginning the term.

Bishop explained that he had not been on hand the opening day because he had taken Gwynn's letter, which reached him while he was doing graduate work at the University of Tennessee, as meaning his dismissal. The letter said, he recounted, that patrons of the school were dissatisfied with him and would send their children elsewhere if he returned.

However, Bishop said, when the time for beginning the school term neared, he began to receive urgent letters from patrons of the district insisting that they did not want him dismissed and urging him to return as principal. By the time he arrived, the school already had been in session several days.

At Mitchell's suggestion, he called on patrons of the school individually. As a result a petition urging his retention was prepared at the county board's hearing. It was said to have been signed by all but two patrons.

Upon Bishop's dismissal by the board, Sidney Lawler, agriculture teacher, was named acting principal and is now in charge of the school.

Dead Cat Hurling Expensive; Judge Rules, $100 Costs

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Accused of hurling a dead cat that struck two neighbors, Clyde Baker, South Mountain, was found guilty of simple assault in Franklin County court yesterday, and was sentenced by Judge Watson R. Davison to pay costs totaling about $100.

Baker was charged with striking Mrs. Bessie Carbaugh and Mrs. Mabel Whitney with the cat. Mrs. Carbaugh found added grievance in the offense in that the cat had been her pet. Mrs. Baker, wife of the defendant, said her husband killed the cat after it had scratched their baby.

The accused man neither admitted nor denied the offense. He said that he was under the influence of liquor and had no recollection of what happened.

Convicts Pierce Walls in Vain

Discovery of Hole Foils Escape Attempt at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Discovery of a hole in the ceiling of a top floor cell in the jail here is believed by officers to have frustrated an attempted escape by three prisoners awaiting transfer to the State penitentiary.

Officers said that investigation today showed a piece of iron taken from a cell cot had been used to dig out mortar and that a large hole had been cut in the 6-inch brick wall. The lower layer was left intact, but dozens of bricks had been removed and a hole made large enough to admit a human body.

Two Fugitives Captured.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—George Kelly and Ralph Moore, Federal prisoners who escaped from the local jail Sunday night by getting through a ventilator to the roof and sliding down a rope made from blankets, were back in custody today.

A searching party came across them this morning as they were preparing to build a fire in some woods in Dinwiddie County about 25 miles from here and brought them back under heavy guard to be held pending their transfer to the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

Annexation Drive Pushed by Suburb

Harrisonburg Council Gets Another Appeal.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Residents of the Edge Lawn section, on the southern limits of the city, appeared before the Harrisonburg Council last night and asked that the suburb be annexed.

The council again referred the matter to a committee. The petition bears 75 per cent of the property owners in the area. Unless the council takes action, the Edge Lawn residents may petition the circuit court to call an election.

The proposed annexation, which would increase the city's population by several hundred, has been pending for several years. The suburb's residents must pay a high tuition for their children to the city schools. They have all other city conveniences.

Apple Crop Held For Higher Prices

Much of Hancock Area's Output Goes in Storage.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—With prices low, much of the apple crop from the great Hancock fruit belt is being placed in cold storage here in the belief that prices will soar in the winter because of the short crop in other parts of the country.

One storage plant here, which has a capacity of 32,000 barrels, is half-filled. The quality of apples is the finest in many years.

Apples in this section are bringing $1.25 a bushel for the best grades.

Adm. Sellers Holds First Reception

Naval Academy Chief Is Host at Annapolis.

Annapolis, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Rear Admiral Davis F. Sellers, new superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Sellers, were hosts this afternoon at the first official reception of the academic term, which took the form of a get-acquainted affair. All officers and civilian instructors attached to the station and members of their families paid their respects from 4 ot 6:30 o'clock.

Admiral Sellers, former commander in chief of the United States fleet, assumed his new post in July, but was at the helm only a few days before going on a vacation abroad, accompanied by Mrs. Sellers. He was away nearly two months, so that today's reception offered the first opportunity to meet all of his local naval associates.

G.O.P. Drive Opening Set At Frederick

County Rallying Place Indicates Stress on Western Md.

Democrats Hear Ritchie as Campaign Starts; Rivals Attend.

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Opening guns in the Republican State campaign will be fired Friday night at a county-wide rally at Frederick. Several State and county candidates will speak, the Republican State central committee announced today.

Selection of western Maryland for the campaign's start is considered significant. It is believed the Republicans will make a supreme attempt to place every county in that section in the Republican column at the November election. They hope to line up a powerful opposition to Gov. Ritchie in the western Maryland area. Normally, most of the counties of that section are Republican, although the G. O. P. majorities in several are small.

The Republicans are confident of carrying the entire Eastern Shore for Harry W. Nice, their gubernatorial candidate. Mr. Nice probably will not be able to speak at the Frederick rally, as he is in Union Memorial Hospital here for treatment of a broken arm suffered in a Monday night fall down a flight of steps.

The Republican city committee, after a meeting today, announced election of William P. Lawson as its chairman. He also is chairman of the Republican State central committee. This is the first time in G. O. P. history in Maryland that the same man has held both posts.

Plans are being made by the city committee to open the campaign here late this week. A meeting probably will be held Saturday night.

The Democratic campaign opened officially tonight at a rally at an uptown amusement center. Gov. Ritchie was a speaker. Daniel J. Sullivan, campaign manager for Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, who was defeated by Gov. Ritchie in the primary, also spoke.

Nearly 3,000 Democratic voters cheered Gov. Ritchie for several minutes when he arose to speak. Representatives of several of the warring factions in the party attended, and leaders held this to be indicative of a united front in the general election.

Hallahan and Rowe Are Named to Hurl in Second Game Today

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 3.—With the world series one day old, American League hearts are heavy. If they aren't, they ought to be. Detroit's Tigers, into whose keeping the league's hopes have been given, today touched a new low in World Series endeavor.

Somewhere, somehow, sometime between their conquest of the American League pennant and their crossing of the World Series threshold today, the Tigers changed their stripes. Unbelieving eyes saw them out there today against the Cardinals. Not the terrible Tigers of the 1934 pennant campaign, the unstoppable team that beat back every challenge, the zestful, hit-lusty crew that laid waste the American League, but a strangely different team of Tigers, bereft of their claws, docile as tabby cats.

They had the jitters, but more of that later. Their respect for the Cardinals was entirely too profound. What came over this team that brooked no opposition during the regular season? Why were they virtualy conceding this first-game defeat by Dizzy Dean?

What on earth kept Schoolboy Rowe out of that opening game today? Surely the Schoolboy was ready. He had four days' more rest than Dizzy. If Rowe were to have an advantage over the Cardinals' ace in this series in a head-on clash, it was today when Dean should not be at his best.

THE finger of suspicion points directly to Manager Mickey Cochrane as the author of the Tigers' new-found docility. All season they had been taking on the tough ones, come what may, but today Cochrane sowed the seed of fear in his hirelings by disdaining to use Rowe against Dean, hinting strongly to the Tigers that Dean was invincible.

Here was a ball club that all season was a vicious, snarling outfit, placed immediately on the defensive in the World Series. Cochrane didn't want to waste Rowe's pitching against Dean's, or so it appeared so strongly that the Tigers could not help but share the feeling. They could not be at their best.

Dean was mowing 'em down in there today when the Tigers were in a position to strike, yet it was no super-game that he pitched. Only Greenberg and Goslin were taking the toe holds that all season marked the Tigers' offensive. Those last two runs the Tigers scored, it must be remembered, occurred after Dizzy had an 8-to-1 lead.

THAT iron infield of the Tigers that had played intact throughout the season collapsed like so much tinfoil. Charley Gehringer, the second base Rock of the Ages, missed a 6-foot throw; Rogell and Owen each threw a ball wide of first; Greenberg permitted a soft grounder to trickle through his legs; in the first 2 1-3 innings every infielder had made at least one error.

They had the jitters against this Cardinal team whose stirring rush of the last two days lifted them into the pennant. They showed it even in their respect for Pepper Martin, the aging hero of the 1931 world series, who sent tremors through the Tigers' collective spines on one laughable occasion in the sixth inning.

Martin was on second when Medwick lifted a high foul fly over third base toward the left field boxes. Third Baseman Marvin Owen hustled across the field to make a superb catch. Martin, on second, bluffed a run to third after the catch and nine Tiger players yelped, nine Tiger players rushed toward the bag to cover, as Pepper calmly made his way back to the bag.

DEAN or no Dean, the Cardinals looked the superior team today from here to there. Loose as ashes, compared to the tautness and tenseness of the Tigers, the Cardinals went through their paces. They had their ace in there pitching, the Tigers didn't. With no Rowe to guide them, the Tigers were floundering about like a cork on a tidal wave. Mickey Cochrane was preoccupied with his catching.

They go back in there again tomorrow with the Schoolboy in the vanguard. But that leakage of zest and ferocity today may be irreparable in this series. Who knows?

Blues Primed For Louisburg

GALLAUDET'S grid team will open its season Saturday at Kendall Green, meeting Louisburg College, of North Carolina. The kick-off will be at 2:20 o'clock.

All omens are favorable for the Blues' coming out party, though little is known of Louisburg's strength. Coach Ted Hughes has 15 veterans at Gallaudet, including Capt. Tex Gamblin, guard.

Gamblin will lead a team into battle averaging 180 pounds—or one of the heaviest assembled at Kendall Green in recent years. The line-up will include Goodwin and Brown, ends; Miller and Tollefson, tackles; Gamblin and McCord, guards; Davis, center; Drake, quarter back; Akin and Kuglitsch, halves, and Hoffmeister, full back.

Hughes has a bevy of dependable reserves ready for action if needed, including three backs who are pushing the regulars for starting roles.

Rules Broken, Is Charge of Sopwith

Construction and Racing Violations Charged by Skipper, Sailing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP).—The controversy over the America's Cup races, smoldering for eight days, today burst into flame as T. O. M. Sopwith, skipper and owner of the defeated British challenger, Endeavour, sailed for home charging violation of both construction and racing rules by the American defender, Rainbow.

The British yachtsman did not go into particulars and specifically exempted any one individual, but said he would not come over again unless the rules are modified.

"We are leaving America with very mixed feelings," he said, as he embarked with Mrs. Sopwith on the Aquitania. "We can not help feeling terribly disappointed by being met over here with a vessel which we feel did not comply with the rules.

Different Interpretation.

"I would not for a moment accuse any official of the New York Yacht Club of acting in any way other than that which he considered to be right. The answer is probably that we do not see eye to eye in the interpretations of some of the important conditions which were agreed on between the New York Yacht Club and the Royal Yacht Squadron.

"We are leaving with a great debt of gratitude to the American public. We have been deeply touched by the reception they have been kind enough to give us and by the many hundreds of letters which we have received from all over the country."

Possibility of 1935.

Asked if there was any possibility he might challenge again next year, Sopwith answered:

"Whether we come back rests with the New York Yacht Club and the deed of gift under which the America's Cup was given to that club."

Asked if he took issue with any individual, the English yachtsman said that no one in particular was at fault, but that it rested rather with the construction rules and the racing-rules.

American Polo Star, Cecil Smith, Is Married

Wading River, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Cecil Smith, one of the three 10-goal men of American polo, and Miss Mary Mulford Miller, of Wading River, were married yesterday.

Their romance began last winter. The Miller family has lived in Wading River since 1799.

Md. and W. & L. Boast Expert Punters

THERE should be some plain and fancy punting when Maryland and Washington and Lee get together Saturday at Lexington.

In disposing of St. John's Maryland revealed some of the best kickers the Old Line squad has boasted in recent years. Coleman Headley, a sophomore, looked particularly good in this department. He kicked them out on the 5-yard line as easily as you lift your foot. The lad looks as if he'll be a great kicker before he hangs up the cleats.

But Maryland does not have to depend on Coleman alone. It has Widmyer, Nelson and Guckeyson, to say nothing of Sothron in the pinches. All are good footers and reliable under fire.

Washington and Lee has one of the South's best punters in Bill Ellis, its lanky half back. It was Ellis' excellent kicking that paved the way for Kentucky's defeat last week, and he was booting a soggy ball in the mud. In all, Ellis got off

Support Fails Crowder As Dizzy Dean Wins

old-fashioned ball park. A city that had been lavishing its praises on the Tigers today found incipient cheers stifled in their throats as the opening game of the series went to the Cards.

A city today was disillusioned. St. Louis' great Dizzy Dean was indeed great. The loquacious one, who has made an art of ego, recognized in Detroit's American League pennant winners just another ball team and he quelled the power in their bats by parcelling out only eight hits—seven of them singles.

Tigers Fall Dismally.

But the Tigers themselves heaped high the gloom that enveloped Detroit fandom. Theirs was a pitiable exhibition as they bore the American League banner onto the world series battle ground.

The Tigers' defense collapsed like a parasol in a hurricane—tense, taut nerves and muscles snapping under the weight of the highly important demands of the occasion. Error on error did the Tigers pile up as the crowd gasped at the woeful exhibition of their favorites. It was a new high, or a new low, for world series play.

Before three innings were played—2 1-3 innings to be exact—the Tigers had committed five grievous errors. Each man of their highly publicized infield contributed one ruinous play—a wild throw, a crucial fumble, or a simple muff—and thus the Tigers set up terrific odds against themselves and Al Crowder, to whom Mickey Cochrane had entrusted the pitching duties.

Never did Detroit recover from those three runs presented the Cardinals in those first three innings, three runs as unearned as Pu Yi's Manchukuo throne. Dejectedly Crowder watched his defense crumble. And Crowder the erstwhile Washington veteran, was making a new bid with Detroit to sweeten the bitter experiences of his World Series efforts against the Giants last year.

The dire need of a pinch-hitter in the fifth inning necessitated the removal of Crowder from the game, and against Fred Marberry and Elon Hogsett the Cardinals completed their rousing 13-hit attack.

Medwick Becomes Hero.

Before I sing an added pean of praise for the great Dean, who entered the World Series wars with but two days' rest from a strenuous pennant campaign, I must mention Joseph M. (Ducky) Medwick, squat, swart, Cardinal left fielder, who blossomed today as a hero in his own right.

Young Mr. Medwick, from the flatlands of New Jersey, who came to the Cardinals by way of their chain-store system, was a .319 hitter during the regular season, but today he was an .800 slugger.

He was the spear head of the Cardinals' offensive. Four crashing hits rocketed from his bat—three singles and a home run, the first of the series.

His bid for a fifth hit required a thrilling catch by White in center field before it was doomed.

The day was made to order for Dean and the driving fast ball that he uncoiled from a wind-up that held the 42,505 in rapt attention. Cold, dark and disagreeable, the afternoon was conducive to fast-ball pitching, and throw his fast ball Dizzy did, whenever his plight was threatening, which was rare.

Dizzy proved his mettle superbly in the third inning. The Tigers, having scored their first run, were still very much in the ball game, though the score was 3 to 1 against them. Two runners were on base, two out, and Hank Greenberg at the plate.

Here the hopeful Detroit fans, seated tier on tier and jamming the aisles, edged forward for the battle between pitcher and batter—the heaviest slugger on the Detroit

"Pa" Off for Series; Elmer Listens In

Dean Boys' Parent on Bus; Brother Is Sulking.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP).—While "Dizzy" Dean was throwing them past the Detroit Tigers today in the opening game of the world series, his father, Albert M. Dean, of Houston, was traversing the first lap of his journey to St. Louis, where he hopes to see both of his famous sons in action starting Friday. He is due to reach St. Louis late tomorrow night.

Elmer "Goober" Dean, the only member of the family left in Houston, listened to the game at a tire repair shop next door to the rooming house in which he and his father "batch." Elmer is the oldest of the three boys.

Wanda Morgan, Last Briton, Defeated

CHESTNUT HILL, Pa., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The National women's golf championship became an all-American competition today as the last British survivor was eliminated and eight United States linkswomen marched into the quarter finals.

Smiling, blue-eyed Wanda Morgan, former British champion and sole remaining member of John Bull's Curtis Cup Team, was shunted out of the tourney when beaten, 1 up, by Mrs. Burt Weil, of Cincinnati, Ohio State champion. Mrs. Weil squared the match at the seventeenth and won out on the eighteenth.

Maureen Orcutt and Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey's arch rivals and members of the United States Curtis Cup Team, also were eliminated during the third round of match play. Miss Orcutt bowed to Mrs. Carl H. Donner, a neighbor from Short Hills, N. J., in a 10-hole match. Miss Glutting was routed

Cut Rate Price For Navy Tilt Announced

High School Students to Benefit; Middies to Stage Parade.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 3 (AP).—High school students of Washington and vicinity will be given a special ticket rate to the Navy-Virginia football game in the Griffith Stadium, Saturday, under an arrangement announced today by the Navy Athletic Association.

Any high school student, between 12 and 18 years of age, will be sold a ticket for half price, 50 cents, at the stadium, plus the 10-cent Government tax. Tickets will give admission to the center-field pavillion.

A similar arrangement has been made for the high school students at Alexandria, Va., and Annapolis. The association officials pointed out that they wanted to make it easier for the students to see the midshipmen parade in the stadium before the game.

The regiment of midshipmen will detrain at the Eckington Place freight yards, Washington, at 1:10 p. m. Saturday, and march to the stadium by way of R street, Florida avenue and Fifth street. They are due to enter the playing field at 1:45 p. m. After going through several evolutions they will file to their seats in the stands.

The clash between the Navy and Virginia is surrounded by tradition. In the first game, played here in 1893, Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States fleet, was a member of the Navy team. One of his teammates was Worth Bagley, who kicked the first point after touchdown.

Bagley, while an ensign, was killed in an attack on shore batteries and some Spanish gunboats at Cardenas, Cuba, during the Spanish-American War. The steering gear of the U. S. S. Winslow, taking part in the action, was shot away and Bagley was killed by a Spanish shell while directing the steering of the ship by its propellers.

Dinneen Classes Rowe Above Dean

Detroit, Oct. 3 (AP).—Bill Dinneen, dean of American League umpires, and a really great major league pitching star in his heyday, is convinced that neither Dizzy Dean nor Schoolboy Rowe is overrated. Here for the big show, Dinneen said:

"Dizzy and the Schoolboy are certain to be outstanding heroes in this series. Both are equipped with everything a great pitcher needs. Of the two, though, I think Rowe is slightly better."

Frisch Lauds Freshmen Of Team

Another Day Is Coming, Cochrane Declares, Confidently.

Detroit, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Manager Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals announced tonight he would start "Wild Bill" Hallahan in tomorrow's second game of the world series.

Mickey Cochrane, the Tigers' pilot, will give the call to "Schoolboy" Rowe.

By Charles Dunkley.

DETROIT, Oct. 3 (AP).—Deathly silence in the Cardinals' dressing room.

Butch Yatkeman, the clubhouse attendant, had his ears glued to the radio, eagerly awaiting the wind-up of the game. Suddenly he yelled, "We win! It's all over!"

Within 10 seconds, heavy fists began pounding on the door. In burst Pepper Martin, the awk-faced third baseman of the Cardinals, with his teammates trooping after him. He cut loose with a blood-curdling yell that shook the window panes.

Won't Be Long Now.

"Well, No. 1 is in the bag," he yelled. "It won't be long now! Boy—what a ball game!"

In trooped the long, gangling, loose-jointed Dizzy Dean and over to his locker to pull off his shoes. Frankie Frisch, manager of the victorious Cardinals, hustled over to shake his hand. The other players immediately followed. Dean amazed the boys with the statement that he had pitched a "terrible game."

"Boys," he said, "I'm telling you the truth when I'm telling you I was lousy in there today. That old curve ball of mine just wouldn't work. I couldn't do a thing with my fast one. That curve ball of mine wouldn't take off, it wouldn't go up or down and as a result I had to pitch my head off. Ain't that a fact? Didn't I have those guys down to three-and-two lots of times?"

Some one asked Jerome Herman Dean—plain Dizzy to the baseball fans of the Republic—what his brother Paul would do when he started against the Tigers.

"Boy," he said, "he'll knock them silly with that fast ball of his. That is, providin' he's right. He's really got a fast one. How he can lay it in there."

Manager Frisch took the victory calmly. He had praise for the freshmen of the team—First Baseman Collins, Catcher De Lancey and Joe Medwick, the outfielder batting hero of the day, with three singles and a home run.

"De Lancey really caught a whale

Dr. Hepp Out $14,000 Betting Dizzy Would Throw Arm Off

By Henry McLemore.

DETROIT, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The biggest financial setback suffered by an individual on a world series game for many years was recorded at Navin Field today when the St. Louis Cardinals, with Dizzy Dean on the mound, defeated the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 3.

The victim was Dr. Parnassus Hepp, a retired surgeon of Amarillo, Tex., who, when he finally quit betting in the eighth inning, had lost a sum roughly estimated at $14,000. Dr. Hepp made his first bet of the day when Dizzy threw his first ball in the opening.

Dizzy's first throw of the game was a smoke ball that carried every ounce of authority and power in his gangling frame—a smoker that had his long right arm out like a rattler on the make.

Fistful of Money.

When Dizzy let it go, Dr. Hepp, brandishing a fistful of serious money stood up and yelled:

"One hundred says his arm flies off on the next pitch. I'll lay 2 to 1 he ain't got a right arm starting the third!"

The customers in Dr. Hepp's section of the grand stand didn't seem to understand, so the good doctor explained. Interrupting his talk only to offer a wager every time Dizzy wound up, Dr. Hepp lectured for three minutes on the

of a game," Frisch boasted. "He looked like a sweetheart in there."

Frisch refused to make any reference to the five blunders the Tigers made in the first three innings when the Cardinals scored three runs.

Over in the Tigers' dressing room just across the hall from the Cardinals, the gloom was as thick as peasoup. Manager Mickey Cochrane went to the showers before he would discuss the game. Backed up to his locker was Del Baker, Tiger coach, muttering over and over:

"It takes four games to win a world series, boys."

Cochrane, while disappointed in losing, wasn't completely downcast.

Had the Jitters.

"It's gone," he said. "Tomorrow's another day and I'll shoot Rowe at them. Crowder pitched a swell game while he was in there. It wasn't his fault that he lost. If my players had got by the jitters in those first two or three innings they would have caused plenty of trouble."

Some one inquired what he thought of the Cardinals.

"They all look good when they win," Cochrane snapped. "Dean was bad today, huh? Well, he had enough to beat us. That ball that Medwick hit was a perfect pitch if I ever saw one. It was a fast ball, low and outside."

After soberly thinking the situation over for a few minutes, Cochrane's tanned face broke into a big grin, and to him it wasn't so bad after all. The other players seemed to share his attitude that "there's another game coming."

Rowe has seen Dizzy Dean pitch and thinks he's "some pitcher."

The ace of the Tigers' hurling staff didn't think that the sensational Dean had "the stuff" today, even though he had little trouble in subduing the Tigers.

Dizzy Loked Tired.

"He looked tired, and it seemed to me he didn't have much stuff after the third inning," said Rowe. "I mean he wasn't as good today as he has been or could be. Boy! Give that lanky fellow a few days rest and he'd be a world beater."

Rowe, when asked whether he'd like to hook up in a hurling duel with the elder Dean, said it would not matter with him.

"I feel great now and am in fine shape," he said.

"It doesn't matter to me who I pitch against if I'm right I'm not worried about the outcome. The Tigers are a long way from being beaten in the series and there's three games they have to lose besides this one before they are through."

Soccer Opens In Prince Georges

County Teams Play First Game Tomorrow; Open Race Is Seen.

COMPETITION will open in the Prince Georges County High School championship soccer series tomorrow afternoon, with six of the seven teams entered listed for play. Opening games in the girls' field ball series also are scheduled, as the same number of teams swing into action.

Soccer games tomorrow will find Maryland Park, last year's champion, matched against Hyattsville at Maryland Park and Laurel scheduled against Mount Rainier at Mount Ranier in northern division contests. A single game in the southern section is listed between Baden and Brandywine at Brandywine.

In field ball the same teams will meet, with the scene of play reversed in each instance. Upper Marlboro soccer and field ball elevens have drawn a bye for the opening day's play.

The schedule will continue through November 9, with each of the schools in the Northern and Southern divisions facing the other twice in home-and-home games. At the conclusion of the regular series, the section winners will meet in a play-off round to determine the county soccer and field ball champions and the right to represent Prince Georges in the State tournaments, conducted annually by the Playground Athletic League of Maryland.

Wide-Open Race Seen.

This season's soccer season promises to furnish a wide-open race for honors, with no team outstanding prior to the start of the campaign. Maryland Park, 1933 titleholder, which advanced last year to the final round of the State tourney in the Western Shore division, has lost practically its entire team of a season ago.

Hyattsville and Mount Rainier also were dealt a heavy blow by graduation. Laurel is the most fortunate of the Northern division teams with regard to material. Elevens in the Southern section, handicapped by small student bodies, generally prove no match for their larger neighbors in the upper part of the county.

Play in the soccer series for junior elevens of the county high schools will start next Tuesday, according to William D. Himes, principal of the Maryland Park High School, who is drafting a schedule.

The complete schedule for the soccer series follows, the same teams meeting in field ball with the scene of play reversed:

Tomorrow—(Northern), Hyattsville vs. Maryland Park at Maryland Park; Laurel vs. Mount Rainier at Mount Rainier; (Southern), Baden vs. Brandywine at Brandywine.

October 12—(Northern), Mount Rainier vs. Hyattsville at Hyattsville; Laurel vs. Maryland Park at Maryland Park; (Southern), Brandywine vs. Upper Marlboro at Upper Marlboro.

October 18—(Northern), Hyattsville vs. Laurel at Laurel; Maryland Park vs. Mount Rainier at Mount Rainier; (Southern), Upper Marlboro vs. Baden at Baden.

October 26—(Northern), Mount Rainier vs. Laurel at Laurel; Maryland Park vs. Hyattsville at Hyattsville; (Southern), Brandywine vs. Baden at Baden.

November 2—(Northern), Laurel vs. Hyattsville at Hyattsville; Mount Rainier vs. Maryland Park at Maryland Park; (Southern), Upper Marlboro vs. Brandywine at Brandywine.

November 9—(Northern), Hyattsville vs. Mount Rainier at Mount Rainier; Maryland Park vs. Laurel at Laurel; (Southern), Baden vs. Upper Marlboro at Upper Marlboro.

Hyattsville High is looking to the soccer season with a great deal more enthusiasm, following the advent to the squad of Bill Burke and Woodrow Schwartz, both of whom are counted on to bolster up considerbly the inexperienced team. Burke plays either goal or full back, while Schwartz has experience at half back and on the line.

Despite its 6-to-0 defeat at the hands of the Catonsville (Md.) High eleven last week, Hyattsville showed much promise and Coach Stanleigh Jenkins believes the team has a real chance for the county title.

Others besides Burke and Schwartz on the first squad are Clinton Quantrille, goal; Bernard Osterman, Olin Kennedy, Warren Buddington and J. Forrester, full backs; Tommy Reed, Hubert Norris, Charlie Joyce and Bruce Barker, half backs, and Raymond Bright, John Fleischman, Bernard Baldwin, Allen Toole, Joe America, Billy Baldwin, Jack Cain, John Moran and Ernest Woodside, line players.

4,495 Shy

Wide Open Spaces Seen as 42,505 Attend Opener.

DETROIT, Oct. 3 (AP).—The official paid attendance at the opening game of the world series here today, was 42,505, considerably below pregame predictions, while the total receipts amounted to $139,843.

The crowd fell short of the 47,000 capacity as vacant patches showed both in the temporary bleachers in left field and the covered stands.

The players' share of the receipts amounted to $71,217.93, with $47,470.60 split among the two contending clubs and the two major leagues, and $26,946.45 to the advisory council.

formation of the human arm. He named every muscle, fiber, corpuscle, joint and hinge, calling many of them by their first or Christian names. He told of their weaknesses and their strength.

"I don't care how dizzy Dizzy is," concluded the doctor, "and he may even insist on mustard with his oatmeal, but it's purely a question of time until he throws his arm in the grand stand. And so, from now on, every time he winds up I want to lay a hundred that the next pitch is the fatal one."

Half Way to Plate.

For a few pitches he didn't have any takers. Everybody remembered that Dizzy had pitched every other day since Halloween and besides, even to the untrained eye, it looked as if Dizzy was going to throw not only his arm, but his shirt, pants, cap and shoes, up to the plate. When he wound up it was like a mighty pine threshing in a storm, and when he finally cut loose the ball he threw himself half way to the plate. And that grunt he gave off every time he wheeled that fireball down the alley! It told you that everything Dizzy Dean had, including the down payment on his electric refrigerator, was on the ball.

But when he had weathered a dozen or such pitches the customers took heart, and started taking all Dr. Hepp wanted to play. When Dizzy was still all in one part at the end of the fifth inning, the customers, feeling a bit sorry for Dr. Hepp, began to give him odds. They laid even money that not even so much as Dizzy's wrist nor his elbow would make a solo flight to first base. The customers got a tremendous scare, and Dr. Hepp a fleeting moment of triumph, however, in the eighth inning when Dizzy was working on Goose Goslin.

Pigeon Enters Scene.

With the count three and two, Dizzy began his wind-up. From the Cardinal dugout came a cry from Brother Paul:

"Rear back, Diz, and fog it through there!"

Diz heard Paul's shout and lifted his ordinary wind-up into a violent threshing. Round and round went his right arm. His head flew back. His knees swung up. The muscles in his neck stood out like ropes. And then he lunged forward to catapult the ball toward the Goose.

"It's coming off now, boys!" roared Dr. Hepp. "You better duck!"

Simultaneously with the doctor's shout and Dizzy's unwinding, a pigeon swooped down over Dizzy's head and sailed toward the plate.

Mistaking the pigeon for Dizzy's arm, Dr. Hepp jumped 6 feet in the air and roared:

"Call a doctor! There it flies! It's off! Pay me, boys!"

This cured the doctor.

"When a guy gets to throwing pigeons feet first up to the plate, it's time to quit," he said.

Women Faint in Jam At Gates in Detroit

Detroit, Oct. 3 (AP).—The reserved seat ticket holders who bought their ducats days ahead of time for the Detroit-St. Louis World Series were caught in a terrific jam at the gates today as 0,000 fans tried to get in at the same time.

Women fainted and men fought and squads of police rushed into the tumult struggling against overwhelming odds in an effort to restore order.

The Opener, Play by Play, With Medwick in Hero Role

First inning, Cards — Martin grounded out, Owen to Greenberg, as he swung at the first pitch; Rothrock lifted a high fly to White, in center field; Frisch grounded sharply to bounce off Owen's glove and was safe at first on the third baseman's error; Medwick singled to left; Collins lined out to White in deep center. No runs, one hit, one error, two left.

First inning, Tigers — White grounded out, Durocher to Collins; Cochrane rolled out, Frisch to Collins; Gehringer drove a single to left; Greenberg bounded out, Martin to Collins, the Cardinal third baseman making a pretty stop and throw. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Second inning, Cards—Delancey cracked the first pitch to Goslin, who backed up for the catch near the left field screen. Orsatti shot a single past Owen. Durocher flied out to White, Orsatti holding first. Dean grounded to Rogell, who tossed to Gehringer for an attempt to force Orsatti, but all hands were safe when the Tiger second baseman dropped the ball for an error.

Martin grounded to Owen and was safe at first, filling the bases as Grenberg was pulled off the bag by Owen's poor throw. It was an error for Owen. Rothrock hit sharply to center for a single, scoring Orsatti and Dean, while Martin raced to third. Frisch grounded sharply to Gehringer, who juggled the ball, but recovered in time to throw out the Cardinal manager at first. Two runs, two hits, two errors, two left.

Second inning, Tigers — Goslin smashed a single past Martin. Rogell fanned, on a called third strike, and Goslin was thrown out trying to steal second, Delancey to Frisch. The Cardinal manager was caught in the neck by the sliding Goslin and appeared painfully hurt by the impact. The players gathered around him, but he recovered quickly and resumed play. Owen fanned, swinging lustily at a high, hard one. For the first time Dean appeared to be having his fast ball under control. He was blazing it through like a rifle bullet. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Third inning, Cards — Medwick lashed a single past Owen; Collins grounded to Greenberg, whose throw to Rogell forced Medwick at second but the Tiger shortstop threw wildly in the attempt for a double play and Collins ran to second on the error. Delancey's hard smash went through Greenberg for another error and Collins ran all the way home before the big Detroit first baseman could recover the ball and throw to the plate. It was the fifth error in three innings by the Tiger infielders and Cochrane called his faltering forces together for a conference. Orsatti flied to Fox in short right field. Durocher hoisted to Fox. One run, one hit, two errors, one left.

Third inning, Tigers—Fox raised a short fly to Collins who made the catch along the foul line. Crowder rolled out, Dean to Collins. White walked, the fourth ball being low but Dean and the Cardinals squawked loudly. Cochrane up. Ball one, inside; ball two, inside. The crowd was yelling wildly as Dean's control slipped. Strike one, called; strike two, called. Dean threw to first and White barely slid into the bag safely. Dean tossed to Collins again. Dean made another snap throw to first and the crowd booed. He did it for the fourth time. Dean stepped out of the box and used the resin bag. Cochrane singled sharply past Durocher, White stopping at second. Gehringer singled through the middle of the diamond, scoring White and sending Cochrane to third. Gehringer was safe at second on Orsatti's poor throw and the Cardinal center fielder was charged with an error. Greenberg fanned, missing a high fast ball by nearly a foot. One run, two hits, one error, two left.

Fourth Inning, Cards—Dean lifted a high fly that Goslin caught a few feet from the left field line, near the bleacher screen. Martin fanned, swinging. Rothrock flied to Owen. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Fourth Inning, Tigers—Goslin grounded out, Frisch to Collins. Rogell lifted a high fly to Medwick in short left. Owen popped to Frisch who ran back for the catch in short right field. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Fifth inning, Cards—Frisch drove a long fly to Fox who made the catch in front of the bleachers. Medwick smashed a home run into the temporary left-field stands. It was the Cardinal slugger's third straight hit. Collins walked. Delancey flied out to White. Orsatti singled through the infield to left, Collins stopping at second. Durocher hoisted to White. One run, two hits, no errors, two left.

Fifth inning, Tigers—Fox fouled out to Collins along the first-base line. Doljack flied to Orsatti. White walked. Dean walked in from the box to protest. He was joined by the Cardinal infield in a loud squawk. White walked, the fourth ball being high and inside. Cochrane grounded to Frisch and was thrown out at first. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

Sixth inning, Cards — Marberry went to the box for the Tigers; Dean slashed a long hit to left center for a double; time was taken out while the lanky Cardinal pitching ace donned his leather jacket; Martin singled sharply past Gehringer and Dean scored standing up; Martin was kept from trying to make second on the throwin; Rothrock sacrificed, Marberry to Greenberg, as Martin galloped to second; Owen made a fine running catch of Frisch's foul along the boxes off left field; Medwick pounded a single to right and Martin slid home on his stomach; Collins poled another single to right and Medwick raced to third; Cochrane went out to confer with Marberry; the Tiger pitcher was removed from the box and replaced by Elon Hogsett, Indian southpaw; Delancey cracked the first pitch over Goslin's head for a double, scoring Medwick and Collins; Orsatti grounded out, Gehringer to Grenberg; four runs, five hits, no errors, one left.

Sixth inning, Tigers—Gehringer grounded sharply to Collins and was out on a close play as Dean raced over to take the throw from the Cardinal first baseman; Greenberg lashed a hit to center and ran to second when Orsatti mishandled the ball. Orsatti was charged with his second error of the game; Goslin poked a single between Martin and Durocher, Greenberg scoring; Rogel bounced out, Frisch to Collins, as Goslin reached second; Owen fanned, swinging; one run, two hits, one error, one left.

Seventh inning Cards—Rogell made a nice stop of Durocher's high bounder and threw him out at first. Dean fanned, swinging lazily at the third strike. Martin grounded sharply to Rogell and was thrown out at first. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Seventh inning, Tigers—The crowd stood up and yelled for a Tiger rally. Fox lifted a high foul to Delancey. Hogsett grounded out, Durocher to Collins. White fanned on a slow ball that was called strike three. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Eighth inning, Cards—Rothrock dropped a single in right center; Frisch bunted and was tossed out, Hogsett to Greenberg, as he sacrificed Rothrock to second; Medwick drove a long fly to White, Rothrock making third easily after the catch; Collins grounded out, Gehringer to Greenberg. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Eighth inning, Tigers—Fullis went to center field for the Cardinals, replacing Orsatti; Cochrane was thrown out on a grounder to Durocher; Gehringer flied to Medwick; Greenberg walloped a home run into the left-field stands; Goslin grounded out, Durocher to Collins. One run, one hit, no errors, none left.

Ninth Inning, Cards—Delancey lined to Goslin; Fullis drove a single over second base; Durocher grounded to Rogell and Fullis was forced at second, Rogell to Gehringer; Dean bounded to Gehringer, who touched second base, forcing Durocher. No runs, one hit, no errors. One left.

Ninth inning, Tigers—Rogell dropped a single along the third-base line; Owen hit a sharp grounder that bounced off Dean's leg directly into Collins' hands; Owen was an easy putout, but Rogell ran to second. Fox hit sharply to Martin, who tagged Rogell on the base line, but failed to catch the runner at first, as he threw low. Walker fanned, swinging. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Emmitsburg Is Victor.

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Emmitsburg High School soccer eleven won their initial game of the season by trimming Walkersville, 6 to 0, here yesterday.

Ex-Newsboy Recalls First Cards-Tigers Series.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 3 (AP). — George Burford, Oklahoma City, who sold newspaper extras during the last world's series between St. Louis and Detroit 47 years ago, sees a great deal of difference in the series starting today and that one.

The best four out of seven games now determine the winner, but back in 1887, when Detroit and St. Louis met before, it was a 15-game series.

The 1887 series resulted in ten games for Detroit and five for St. Louis, the former newsboy recalls.

Burford also recalls that the Detroit team of that day had a Rowe in the line-up—Jimmy Rowe, third baseman.

Injury Jinx Persists at Episcopal

Minor Hurts Are Handicap as Team Prepares for Annual Tech Fray.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.). Gloom prevails at the Episcopal High School football camp on the eve of the annual Tech battle. At least half the regulars are suffering with minor injuries; sprains, twisted ankles and several cases of "Charley horse" being the most severe. None of the ailing gridders are expected to remain on the sidelines, however, when the Cherry and Black crosses the river Friday afternoon to invade Tech's stadium.

Episcopal has battled Tech annually on the gridiron since 1902.

Since the year 1839, Episcopal has been the leading preparatory school in the South and especially in Virginia. William G. Bibb, of Alabama, was captain of the first team organized here on December 8, 1881, and participated in its first game, nine days later, December 17, of the same year against the Kendall School of the District. Episcopal won the game by the old scoring method, ¼ goal to 0.

Alexandria's first and second teams were driven through a hard scrimmage by Coach Maurice Givens at Baggett's this afternoon. The first-stringers scored at will over the scrubs, who were using supposedly Western plays.

Lindsey Noble, big right tackle for the Twins, will be confined to the sidelines when the time is called for the locals to line up against the big Maroon team Friday. Noble suffered a mangled hip, that required five stitches, yesterday.

The Pirate A. C. has scheduled the Centennials, of Washington, for the feature attraction at Hayden's Field Sunday. The Cents were booked when the Northeast Body Works canceled.

The Fraters will defend their State championship crown at Richmond Sunday, October 21, opposing the Arrows. Sunday, November 18, at Norfolk, a second State rival will be encountered in the Clancy A. C.

A drill has been set for Friday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Kansas Students 'Mugged' to Break Ticket Lending

LAWRENCE, Kans., Oct. 3 (AP).—University of Kansas students who buy season tickets to football games and other activities are being "mugged" with numbers to discourage the practice of lending or selling the ticket.

Before a student may get his season activity ticket—one admitting him to football games, other athletic contests, school dances, concerts and the like—he must stick his head through a hole in a booth and pose with a number hung from his neck for a picture.

The picture is placed on the activity ticket and admission is granted only if the bearer of the card resembles the picture.

V. P. I. Changes Line-up for Florida

Negri Is Moved to Tackle; Ochs, Botnick Also Are Shifted.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.). Virginia Tech's football forces are fighting mad after a little punt-blocking episode that cost them just 23 points in the Temple game. They look to the Florida game here Saturday as the trail back to the crest they long to scale.

Just as Head Coach Henry Redd predicted last week, his hefty batch of green but promising sophomores learned a lot when face to face with Pop Warner's gridiron dynamite. The sophomores are a wiser, less cocky, more valiant lot after their knocks in Temple Stadium.

Any band of gridders as determined to bury the past under sparkling play in games to come is certain to be hard to stop when the Gators and teams that follow line up for combat. And they will be steadier after tasting the dregs at Philly. They will not so easily be unnerved in the future by such mishaps as blocked punts.

Set-up Change.

They tore into the Tech freshman eleven in scrimmage today with a mad-cap sort of game that heralds a Tech team hard to get along with on Miles Stadium turf this week-end. A changed set-up in the back field and line added its spice to a line defense that went to pieces in the third and fourth quarters at Temple after playing great ball for two periods.

Red Negri has been moved in from end to the tackle berth he filled on the crack '32 team. Norman Ochs is back at tackle, where he played for two years, though he came through with a bang-up exhibition against Owls, of Warner. Benny Botnick, another pace setter last week, is back at varsity guard. Dave Thomas and Lou Fittro are the new wingmen.

Briton Loses

by Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, 7 and 8.

Another upset had its dramatic conclusion on the nineteenth green when Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, of New York, former Southern champion, was put out by Dorothy Traung, 20-year-old San Francisco player, making her debut in the National. At dormie 2 Miss Traung lost both the seventeenth and eighteenth holes. Then she took the nineteenth with a brilliant 4, while Mrs. Lake approached into a bunker and needed a 6.

Miss Van Wie Wins.

Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, defending champion, came close to elimination, but her Garrison finish caught Rosamond Vahey at the nineteenth.

Aside from these unusual proceedings, the third round proceeded along decorous lines. Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, who has been women's champion five times, administered a punishing defeat to Barbara Stoddard, young society girl from Piping Rock, N. Y., 8 and 6. Mrs. Vare was in her old invincible form. For the 12 holes the match endured she was exactly square with par. Out in 39, she stood even up. Of the 12 holes she won 9, lost 1 and halved 2.

Maryland U.

31 punts during the game and averaged 41 yards. That's kicking in any man's league.

Maryland will be in the proverbial "pink" for this important game, which will have a decided bearing on the outcome of the Southern Conference championship race. Keller, reserve end, will be on the sidelines, but Minion, regular tackle, who was out with Widmyer, will be ready for duty, and this more than balances Keller's loss.

Coach Jack Faber has been using Widmyer at half and quarter back in practice and may alternate him at these positions against the Generals.

Famous Pros To Invade Kenwood

Runyan and MacFarlane Arrive Here Today; Goggin Cards 71.

GOLFDOM'S gold hunters never believe in using up all their shots in practice rounds.

It is for this reason that they are waiting until today and tomorrow to launch their tune-up campaigns for the $2,000 National Capital Open championship scheduled Saturday and Sunday at Kenwood's course.

Thus far Willie Goggin, the 200-pound giant from San Francisco, is the only golf-faring professional with a National reputation who has pulled into port safely. Walloping Willie—for he smacks the old pill a mile—arrived Tuesday and had his first taste of the course. Yesterday, in full view of Al Houghton and half a dozen other local pros, he strutted his stuff to the extent of a 71 that was three shots better than Houghton's score.

Runyon Knows Layout.

Today most of the well-known figures who have decorated the Kenwood links during the past three championships will be on the scene, some anxious to pick up where they left off last fall. Already having filed his entry, Paul (Little Poison) Runyan, National P. G. A. ruler and defending National Capital champion, is expected either late this afternoon or early tomorrow. Runyan knows the layout. Therefore, he will need little practicing to become reintroduced to Kenwood's fairways, greens and rough—and perhaps the rough will not be necessary.

That scholarly looking gent from Tuckahoe, N. Y., Willie MacFarlane, 1931 champion, has promised Houghton he will show up today, as have Johnny Revolta, young Milwaukee star; Walter Kozak, of Flushing, Long Island, runner-up last season; Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, Ryder Cup star; Willie Klein, of New York; Billy Burke, of Cleveland, 1931 National Open title holder, Johnny Kinder, and Bobby Cruickshank.

The whereabouts of Walter Hagen, the great showman, still remained a mystery. Someone reported yesterday that he left Philadelphia for Detroit to attend the world series. He may pop up at Kenwood any moment. Larruping Leo Diegel, a one-time District pro, now a Philadelphian, told Houghton over long-distance the other day he was laid low with an attack of shingles. Whereupon, Dr. Charlie Cole, Sibley Hospital superintendent, spent all of 20 minutes yesterday explaining to the boys the cause and effect of shingles. Leo stated he would be on hand, if his shingles subsided.

Field Boosted to 75.

Some 20 additional entries yesterday boosted the field to the 75 mark. Tonight the good folk of the golf committee, headed by J. E. Hutchinson, jr., will gather around and work out the pairings and starting times. There won't be any kick if the field reaches 125. Not at all.

The local lads who entered yesterday were Danny Barton, of Army and Navy; Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional; J. Monro Hunter, sr., former Indian pro; Peter Jackson, Russell Hoage, W. H. McCullough, Mathew Rettew, Dave Thomson and Toby Tyler.

Teakwood, at $221.60 Mutuel, Thrills Crowd of 6,000 in Laurel's Steeplechase

Choice Falls Going Over Last Jump

Redbridge Fumbles Out; McKay Wins Despite Losing Stirrup.

By Walter Haight.

TEAKWOOD, $221.60, $92.80, $20.60—read 'em and weep all ye who didn't have that ticket No. 2959. Those are the figures that made the mutuel board sag at nearby Laurel yesterday afternoon. The same mutuel board that had displayed the scanty figures on eight favorites out of ten races, and previous to this race the man who puts up the slabs had not been forced to reach for double numbers.

The monster pay-off, one of the largest in Maryland racing history, came in the steeplchase, the usual 2-mile test for claiming jumpers. It was a thriller from start to finish, with Redbridge, the favorite, falling at the final fence, as Teakwood was running head and head with the Macomber star. Anchors Aweigh, from the Mrs. C. H. White barn, was second, and George Jessel, in the colors of Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer, was third.

Fell Twice Before.

Seldom has a horse gone to the post with less to recommend him than did Teakwood, a 7-year-old gelded son of Heverswood and Almond Eyes. A maiden, Teakwood was away from the races from September of 1932 until last August, when he ran third to the cheapest sort on the flat at Charles Town. He tried the jumps twice at Timonium and fell on each occasion.

Is Off Slowly.

There was no indication that Teakwood, racing for H. B. Langdon, would figure in anything but the lower end of the chart as the field went away. He was keeping George Jessel company in last place as the group went by the judges' stand on the first swing. Springdale Rose was setting the pace and Jockey Christian had a confident hold on Redbridge. It was not until the swing into the backstretch for the second time that Teakwood, jumping smoothly, moved up as a menace to Redbridge.

Going to the tenth fence, Jockey McKay lost his left stirrup and between trying to recover his foothold and trying to stay on the horse he was of little help to his mount. For two jumps, McKay was in this predicament, but Teakwood was running the heart out of Redbridge all the while.

Escapes Injury.

At the last fence, Teakwood and Redbridge went into the air almost as a team, but only Teakwood landed safely. Redbridge skidded on his neck as Jockey Christian miraculously escaped injury. It was a mere formality for McKay to gallop his mount across the finish line.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOLDIERS DREAM, $3.70, $2.60, $2.30; SUN IDOL, $5.50, $3.90; TEN LAW, $3.10.

SOLDIERS DREAM, hard hustled after the start, went into command when leaving the back stretch; was kept under tenacious handling and had enough left to withstand SUN IDOL. Latter worked his way up stoutly in the first half mile. Came to the outside for the closing drive and finished in determined fashion. TEN LAW, outrun in the early stages, settled in full stride and closed with excellent courage. SUN FAIRPLAY worked his way up on the inside, made a bold effort at the final furlong pole, but faltered during the losing sixteenth. ERIN LAD displayed good speed for a half mile, then weakened. COIL showed early speed. BEYOND DOUBT was held safe.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; foaled in Maryland. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:08. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEELHEAD, $4.30, $2.40, $2.10. MAJOR GENERAL, $2.50, $2.10; CAMPAGNA, $2.40.

STEELHEAD, allowed to race on his own courage for the first six furlongs while on the outside of the leaders, was put to a drive in the last five-sixteenths, wore the leaders down at midstretch, then came out smartly. MAJOR GENERAL, stoutly restrained back of CAMPAGNA for the first seven furlongs, assumed a brief lead under strong urging, but could not keep pace when the winner challenged. CAMPAGNA, steadied in the early stages, saved ground the entire trip, but was not good enough when shaken up. HUT, knocked off stride by MAJOR GENERAL going to the first turn, recovered quickly to hold a prominent position, but was held safe when put to a drive. MARY MAY had no mishaps.

THIRD RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:39½. Winner, H. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEAKWOOD, $221.60, $92.80, $20.60; ANCHORS AWEIGH, $8.90, $6.50; GEORGE JESSEL, $5.20.

TEAKWOOD moved into a foward position after the first mile, challenged strongly going to the ninth fence, then P. McKay lost his stirrup irons for the next two fences; upon recovering his irons McKay readily sent TEAKWOOD to REDBRIDGE, took a brief lead, then came out when the latter fell at the final fence. ANCHORS AWEIGH, raced kindly from the beginning, worked his way up gradually and held on well. GEORGE JESSEL, far back most of the trip, passed badly tiring horses at the end. SPRINGDALE ROSE was game after the first mile. CAPSTAN showed most of the trip. HOLE HIGH was outrun throughout. REDBRIDGE was tiring in the last half mile, then fell at the last fence. He broke down badly. BAD BOB unscated his rider at the tenth fence. He was remounted and finally lost his rider at the twelfth jump. ZERMATT lost rider at the eighth jump.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:09½. Winner, A. W. Abbott's b. f. (2), by High Cloud—Runelise. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HILISE, $4.10, $2.40, $2.10; JIM JOHN, $2.70, $2.10; ANACREON, $2.30.

HILISE, taken under strong restraint while following ANACREON, assumed command at his leisure, then was shaken up during the closing furlong to stall off JIM JOHN. Latter, sluggish during the opening furlong, moved up fast on the inside in the last five-sixteenths, but could not seriously threaten the winner. ANACREON displayed speed for the first half mile, then began to tire. STAR CHASE was unable to improve his position at any stage. JOBAKHETA broke swiftly, but lacked speed. CHINESE INDIAN was never a factor.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Severn. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:42. Winner W. S. Kilmer's dk. ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN APOLLO, $10.70, $3.70, $3.10; BELIEVER, $2.40, $2.30; BLACK SONG, $3.00.

SUN APOLLO, permitted to settle in full stride before moving to his field, went to the outside when entering contention, came around the leaders and, in a fast finish, was up in the last 50 yards. BELIEVER, kept on the outside of the leaders while close up early, was hard urged to gain a slight lead at the final furlong pole, but could not withstand SUN APOLLO. BLACK SONG was used up racing with PRINCE WICK and he weakened during the closing furlong. JESS came wide into the home stretch and could not threaten. PRINCE WICK had a lot taken out of him setting the pace. TELL IT went well for five furlongs. The others were held safe.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:08. Off at once. Winner, Ascot Stable's ch. g. (5), by John P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN SPUR, $17.30, $8.90, $3.20; ST. STEPHENS, $28.00, $6.90; †DREEL, $2.40.

GOLDEN SPUR, kept on the inside during the early stages while racing strongly, swung to the outside of the leaders entering the home stretch, closed full of run and was up in the last few strides. ST. STEPHENS, forced to race on the outside while bettering his position early, fought it out tenaciously all during the stretch drive. DREEL kept forwardly placed, gained a brief lead and then held on stoutly. BAND WAGON secured racing room on the inside to race in the thick of contention. He faltered during the final drive. STROLL ALONG could not enter a forward position. DARTLE broke slow and raced far back most of the trip. RED WAGON held safe after having much speed in the first mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENCADER, $21.20, $8.60, $5.00; GAY PARTY, $3.80, $2.50; DR. SYNTAX, $3.60.

PENCADER, steadied off the early leaders until leaving the back stretch, circled his company when shaken up, wore GAY PARTY down and was stoutly ridden thereafter. GAY PARTY, forwardly placed and nicely rated early, took command entering the home stretch, but weakened approaching the finish. DR. SYNTAX raced strongly reserved for six furlongs, responded when shaken up, but was not good enough. CAMBRIDGESHIRE lacked early speed and could never reach a contending position. JIMMY D. began to weaken after seven furlongs. WORTHINGTON was rushed off his feet to gain the lead, he was used up and quit badly.

AIRWAY, hurried into a forward position going to the first turn, went up between the leaders midway of the back stretch to take command and, steadied thereafter, had enough left to stall off FAIR BILLY. Latter, in the thick of contention from the beginning, held well for the closing drive. MISS CATALAN went strongly throughout and continued gamely to save third. COAT TAILS swung wide at the stretch turn, but finished willingly. WISHING STAR slipped through on the inside at the stretch turn, but failed to rally in the closing furlong. ARAB had no mishaps. SYRIAC was unable to menace.

Young Men Win In Army Polo

Davis Leads His Team to 6-2 Triumph.

The "Young Men's" polo team of the United States Army, with 44-year-old Capt. C. E. (Stub) Davis at No. 1, trounced the "Old Men's" Army team yesterday afternoon, 6 to 2, at West Potomac Park.

The "Old Men" denied vehemently after the game that the better team won and last night were eagerly seeking a return contest in which to redeem themselves.

Capt. Davis scored three of the winners' three goals while Maj. C. C. Smith tallied the losers' counters, both coming in the first period. Lieut. Harry Stadler, "Young Men's" No. 2, scored twice and Lieut. George Read, No. 3, once. The winners were the same team which defeated the Mexican Army polo-ists three straight games last month.

| Old Men. | Position. | Young Men. |
|---|---|---|
| Lieut. Rogers | No. 1 | Capt. Davis |
| Maj. Smith | No. 2 | Lieut. Stadler |
| Lt. Col. Patton | No. 3 | Lieut. |

A Brief Brochure Recalls That a Famous Play Was Produced Fifty Years Ago

"Parlor Match" Brought Noted Star to Fame

Was Anna Held's First Hit; Larry Adler Is Pleased; About the Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

September, it seems, is an eventful month in Asbury Park, N. J.

It was during the month just past that the shore resort was horrified by the sudden spectre of the S. S. Morro Castle, cast up as an inferno of death and destruction on the very beach of the town. It was in the same month an even half century ago that Asbury Park was thrilled by an event of totally different character and complexion.

In September, 1884, the Jersey resort city saw the first performance on any stage of Charles H. Hoyt's comedy of "A Parlor Match," with one of the most notable casts in the annals of the American theater. In certain quarters, the fiftieth anniversary of this gay premiere is being fittingly observed.

For instance, for some unknown benefactor in Santa Monica, Calif. —to whom I am none the less grateful because his identity is not known—comes a nicely contrived brochure refreshing a hazy memory upon many features of the "A Parlor Match" opening.

Many Old Reminders.

It is a reminder, for example, that the play was produced by Charles E. Evans and the late Florenz Ziegfeld as a starring vehicle for the old-time team of Evans & Hoey—of which Charles E. Evans was one-half and William "Old Hoss' Hoey the other—and that it was to appear in this play that Anna Held was brought to this country. This column would have been saved a deal of trouble, also not so long ago if this valuable pamphlet had been at hand, because it reveals further that "Daisy Bell," or "A Bicycle Built for Two," was introduced in this Hoyt comedy—a matter that was put up to this department and sidestepped as deftly as might be.

Among other songs still fresh in the memories of some still living that were sung in this piece may be mentioned, "The Man That Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," "I Haven't For a Long Time Now," "Little Annie Rooney," "Good-Bye Bon Soir, Tra-La-La" and Miss Held's "Won't You Come and Play With Me?"

Had Record Run.

All this may seem to some not to date back quite as far as 50 years ago. Well, some of it doesn't. "A Parlor Match" broke all long-run records in its day by being played for ten consecutive years, with necessary substitutions of both players and songs, from time to time, and was an active theatrical property for 11 years before it was relegated to the library of stock and amateur plays.

Since this informative eight-page booklet comes from Santa Monica, can it be possible that "A Parlor Match" is being revived by Marion Davies?

The Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts will cooperate with the Children's Theater of New York in the presentation of its plays at the National Theater this season. Students of the academy will participate in a program of broadcasts over the radio, announcing the plays to be presented, and will read the first act, in turn, of each of the plays to be offered by the Children's Theater players. Maurice Greet, director of the academy, will conduct the radio programs. The new term of the academy, incidentally, begins next Monday. Enrollments are now being received at Connecticut avenue and K street.

What's the Delay.

Mr. John N. Quinn, 307 Elm street, Takoma Park, D. C., is slightly dismayed that the National Capital should seem to lag behind cities, towns and villages of less importance and smaller population in the presentation of the new film plays of first magnitude.

In a friendly letter to this department, Mr. Quinn points out that our downtown, first-run picture houses "are yelling about the wonderful programs being put in operation, yet Phoenixville, Pa., a country town about 30 miles beyond Philadelphia, the past summer was treated to "The Cat's Paw" and Ocean City, N. J., has already had "Cleopatra" and "The Last Gentleman," but Washington, supporting the movies with extreme liberality, as yet has not seen these movies. Why? Why?"

So many complicated elements enter into the tricky business of booking films that I would not undertake to offer Mr. Quinn an explanation without a minute investigation of circumstances in each specific instance.

They Are on Way.

However, "Cleopatra" opens here tomorrow. "The Cat's Paw" is on the way and I think every assurance may be given even the most impatient lovers of the cinema that by the time the season has run its course the Capital will have seen practically all of the pictures that are worth seeing.

If towns like Phoenixville, Franklin, Oil City, Pa., Ocean City, N. J., and the like precede Washington on the release charts of the film exchanges Washington may still derive some comfort from contemplation of the fact that many of the most important productions of the major studios are seen here before they are presented in the celluloid cathedrals that line Broadway.

And after all, any picture is a first-run until you have seen it. So what?

So the picture industry ought to be devoutly grateful for a host of picture lovers as interested in its product and as jealous of their prerogatives as Mr. Quinn is.

If I haven't spanked the bookers with quite the severity requested in a portion of his letter not quoted, I hope he will forgive me. We have so much spanking to do!

There may have been a more elated young man than Larry Adler in Washington yesterday, but I doubt it. Mr. Adler, in case you haven't heard, is the youthful virtuoso who is demonstrating on the stage of the Earle Theater that the harmonica is a musical instrument worthy of respect. Night before last Larry went on the air as guest artist with the crafty Ben Bernie and "all the lads," his competition on the stage at Loew's Fox. Naturally, Larry did his prettiest. I didn't hear it, but it must have been pretty pretty, for no sooner were they off the air than the Ol' Maestro received the following wire, he did:

"That Larry was simply swell. Please tell him. Warmest regards."

The sender? Oh, just a fellow up in Bronxville, N. Y., by the name of Jerome Kern, who hasn't done much in the way of music but compose "The Cat and the Fiddle," "Music in the Air" and enough other successful operettas to make a list longer than you have been in town!

Larry Adler was so happy about it yesterday afternoon that he forgot to play the obligato for Bert Walton's tenor. I couldn't get my money back because I was in on a pass, which is the way things have been breaking lately.

Dots and Dashes.

Tom Bally, West Coast director of advertising and publicity for Paramount Pictures, on a swing around the grand circle dropped by yesterday to learn that there was little he could do to improve a service to dramatic editors that is already practically perfect . . . An old newspaper man himself, Tom knows what they want and how they want it . . . So he gives it to them that way . . . Three recent Broadway hits and a mystery melodrama have been selected by the Montgomery Players for their 1934-35 season . . . The first one to be produced, "The Late Christopher Bean," by Sidney Howard, is now in rehearsal . . . It was played on the stage by Pauline Lord and Walter Connolly and on the screen by Marie Dressler and Lionel Barrymore . . . Miss Lord is soon debuting in the flickers as "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" . . . When Max Reinhardt produces "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "The Miracle" for the Warner Brothers, his "right-hand man" will be Jean Muir, last seen here in "Desirable" . . . She assisted him greatly, they say, in staging the "Dream" in the Hollywood Bowl recently . . . Al Jolson's cut of "Wonder Bar," which he made for Warners on a percentage basis instead of salary, because it looked like a flop, is estimated to be $700,000 to date . . . The picture has grossed $1,450,000 up to now . . . Dick Powell has had that no-marriage clause deleted from his contract . . . Heigh-ho!

Agog-and-a-Half Note.

What! Two days now and no previews? The boys must be slipping!

Blondes Seem to Have the Call!

With Miriam Hopkins, Mae West and Grace Moore also scheduled to occupy local screens next week, it is interesting to note that June Knight, another blonde, above at left, will be pictured, beginning today at the Rialto, with Roger Pryor and the late Russ Columbo in "Wake Up and Dream," and that Constance Bennett, still another one, above at right, will come along to Loew's Fox tomorrow in "Outcast Lady," the new screen version of Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat." Gentlemen who produce pictures, at least, evidently prefer them!

Straight From the Studios

Author of "It Happened One Night" Writes Another One; Natural Color Photography Is Being Conserved; Gossip of Hollywood Goings-on.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Oct. 3.—Just why Damon Runyon should have all the finnings is a question. After all, Samuel Hopkins Adams wrote the original from which "It Happened One Night" was adapted.

JOAN CRAWFORD.

It was "Lady for a Day," directed by Frank Capra, which started the Runyon vogue, but "It Happened One Night" went that picture even one better.

Anyway, it's Adams who gets the break this time with a story called "In Person," with a Hollywood setting. It's all about a picture star who becomes a success overnight, but who can't stand the public side of the life. The Garbo idea. So she finally goes to a plastic surgeon, who devises various disguises for her without facially disfiguring her. Ginger Rogers is named as probably the star.

"Wizard" Awaits Ideal Treatment.

Line-up of color pictures to be made this season finds "The Wizard of Oz" a lively entrant. It probably will benefit by the new process which is attracting so much attention since "Cucaracha" was screened.

The ideal treatment is still being sought for the "The Wizard." It may turn out as a musical fantasy of appeal to grown-ups as well as children, which would be along the general lines of the stage show that was so popular when Montgomery and Stone appeared in it.

It is understood that technicolor production will be limited this season to conserve the novelty of this type of film. Among the pictures named as possibilities in color are "Becky Sharp," with Miriam Hopkins; "The Peacock's Feather," with Ann Harding, and perhaps an Irving Thalberg production.

Ray in "Dream In Frisco.

Charley Ray will assume the role of Flute in the San Francisco presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream." Ray appeared in a benefit performance of this play at Hollywood Bowl ten years ago. Ray has been making a steady comeback in pictures.

New Gowns For Irene.

Irene Dunne is having more attention paid to her costumes than almost everybody in pictures. Frank George is providing her with some stunning hats for "Sweet Adeline" and Bernard Newman, an Eastern designer, has just been signed by RKO to look after her garb for "Roberta," another Jerome Kern musical, in which she is to play next.

Nagel Sticks Around.

Stage lure in New York notwithstanding, Conrad Nagel is staying in Hollywood for still another picture, "One Hour Late," in which Joe Morrison and Helen Twelvetrees play the leads, with Toby Wing assisting. Nagel has done two stage plays for Henry Duffy on the Coast and expected to leave for New York shortly, but the films seem to be getting their grip again.

Film Pageant in Review.

Carl Laemmle, jr., plans to leave October 10 for three months in Europe, accompanied by Harvey Zehner, on quest for new writers and players.

Lionell Atwill will be seen in a characteristic role in "Caprice Espangnole," with Marlene Dietrich and Joel McCrea. He will play the character of Don Pasqual.

Gail Patrick and Jean Edwards are vacationing in Del Monte and San Francisco.

Toby Wing and Jackie Coogan having fun at the Biltmore Bowl.

Pauline Lord, though a native daughter, is seeing Agua Caliente for the first time.

Robert Montgomery is a tennis shark.

Joan Crawford started work yesterday on her new picture, "Forsaking All Others," being directed for the first time by W. S. Van Dyke.

At the age of 16 Jean Muir was advised by Ethel Barrymore not to smoke, and she never has.

Like a motorman going for a street-car ride on his day off, Alan Hale took in four pictures and two stage plays—and he is working in three pictures at the same time.

Capital Drama Season Begins With Premiere

National Reopens Monday With New Play; Films for the New Week.

Washington's season of the legitimate drama will open next Monday night in the National Theater with the first performance on any stage of "The Farmer Takes a Wife," a new play by Frank B. Elser and Marc Connelly. The principal roles will be played by June Walker and Herb Williams, supported by Henry Fonda, Margaret Hamilton, Ralph Riggs and others deemed especially fitted for their tasks by Max Gordon, the producer.

"The Farmer Takes a Wife" is a drama of Erie Canal life and was adapted from Walter D. Edmonds' novel, "Rome Haul." Before undertaking the direction of the play, Mr. Connelly, in company with Mr. Edmnods and Walter Oenslager, scenic designer, made a tour of central New York State in order to make sure that their play would be atmospherically correct.

The action is laid in the period of Civil War. There will be the customary matinee on Wednesday and Saturday.

• • • •

Beginning tomorrow morning, Washington devotees of the cinema will find available for their enjoyment, at Loew's Palace Theater, one of the most imposing spectacles of the year in Cecil B. De Mille's production of "Cleopatra," featuring Claudette Colbert, Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon, supported by Ian Keith, Arthur Hohl, Gertrude Michael, C. Aubrey Smith, Robert Warwick, William Farnum, Irving Pichel, Harry Beresford, Jack Mulhall and thousands more. The film compresses the highlights of Cleopatra's exciting life into one of the most spectacular pictures ever made. It was personally directed by Mr. De Mille and will be supplemented by a new "Silly Symphony" entitled "The Flying Mouse," and "Pro Football," a short reel interpreted by Pete Smith in his inimitable fashion.

• • • •

Grace Moore, brilliant soprano of the concert and operatic stages, will be the pictured star at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "One Night of Love," one of the sensational successes of the early fall season. In this beautifully staged, acted and sung Trilby-like story, Miss Moore's gorgeous voice is revealed in excerpts from many standard grand operas, the climax of the play coming with the singing of the "One Fine Day" aria from Puccini's "Madam Butterfly." The supporting cast is led by Tullio Carminati and Lyle Talbot and includes Luis Alberni, Mona Barrie, Nydia Westman and numerous others. The production, which is an extremely beautiful one, was directed by Victor Schertzinger, himself a musician and composer of note. The stage bill will be headlined by Don Bestor and his Radio Orchestra, assisted by Joy Lind, Neil Buckley and Charles (Ducky) Yontz. Cookie Bowers, mouthpiece of the cartoon comedies; Paul and Nina Ghezzi, sensational entertainers, and Rogers and Wynne, in "Now and Then," will complete the vaudeville program. The bill will be augmented by Universal News and orchestral contributions.

• • • •

Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea are the featured players in "The Richest Girl in the World," chief screen feature of the bill announced for RKO-Keith's heater, beginning tomorrow. They are supported by Fay Wray, Reginald Denny, Henry Stephenson and an excellent cast in a story that is humorous, romantic and thoroughly entertaining. Although the theme is a familiar one—the quest of true love by a tremendously wealthy young woman, who wants to be sure she is wooed for herself and not for her fortune—it is here treated with originality, cleverness and charm. The bill will be completed by the customary short-reel features, including the new Pathe News and a college songsreel.

• • • •

Michael Arlin's Iris March, one of modern fiction's most glamorous heroines, comes to life once more on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning tomorrow, in the person of Constance Bennett. "Outcast Lady" is the new title bestowed on "The Green Hat," but the narrative remains about the same, having lost none of its pungent flavor in its latest picturization. Miss Bennett is supported by Herbert Marshall, Hugh Williams, Henry Stephenson, Lumsden Hare, Ralph Forbes and numerous others, who add appreciably to the forcefulness of a tragic story of defeated love. The stage bill at the Fox next week will be supplied by Michael Fokine's ballet corps in a form of divertissement new to the stages of the motion-picture theaters. Fox Movietone News and Prof. Lampkin's orchestra will augment the program.

• • • •

Opening today, the Rialto Theater will present "Wake Up and Dream," a filmusical in which the stellar roles are taken by Roger Pryor, June Knight and the late Russ Columbo. This was Columbo's big picture, the one he had waited months for the chance to make. He is said to give his best performance in it and to sing better than ever. The song numbers include "Too Beautiful," "Let's Pretend There's a Moon" and "When You're in Love." The supporting cast is comprised of Catherine Doucet, Henry Armetta, Andy Devine, Spencer Charters, Wini Shaw, Gavin Gordon, Richard Carle, Paul Porcasi, Arthur Hoyt and Gertrude Green. Short sound subjects and the Universal News, with Graham McNamee will complete the bill.

---

The romantic, thrilling and often amusing story of a lady Raffles will be unfolded on the screen of Loew's Columbia for the week beginning tomorrow, when the chief feature of the bill will be "Notorious Sophie Lang," with Gertrude Michael, the Calpurnia of "Cleopatra," in the title role. Others importantly cast are Alison Skipworth, Paul Cavanaugh and Arthur Byron. The story is a fast-moving romance of a beautiful girl crook who outwits the police of several countries. The program will be supplemented by a new issue of the Paramount News, a comedy and added short subjects.

---

An unnamed major screen attraction at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow, will be supplemented by a full 15-minute newsreel, and a varied array of short sound subjects. Announcement of the feature picture will be made tomorrow, if its identity as the latest vehicle of a popular feminine star has not already been guessed.

---

Another of the Indepeendent Burlesque Association's attractions that are meeting with such favor this season will occupy the boards at the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the customary Sunday matinee. The new offering bears the title of "Hot Shots" and features Billie Diamond as its principal feminine dazzler. Billy Foster and Frank Kramer are the comics, supported by Johnny Barry, Lew Lewis, Harry Allen, Ceil Von Dell, Patsy Johnson, Evelyn Brooks and a long list of others, not forgetting the beauty chorus of 16 dancing girls.

Stocks Droop Two-Tenths in Quiet Trading

Better Investment Feeling Revealed; Sales Rise to 410,350 Shares.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Stocks pursued a quiet course today despite a further sharp decline in commodities.

The pattern of securities markets seemed to betoken improved investment confidence and less fear of currency inflation.

In early trading, the share market exhibited an inclination to fall in line with the upward tendency in Federal securities, but a break of about 3 cents a bushel in wheat and pressure on rubber and other commodities restrained buying in the share list.

Traders Remain Shy.

Traders remained shy of stocks and turnover was only 410,350 shares against 371,170 yesterday. However, followers of the market were impressed by the steadiness of the list in the face of liquidation in commodities. Rails and utilities, deserted by inflation-minded traders in recent months, were relatively firm.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 20 rail shares was slightly higher, while the 90-stock index dipped two-tenths of a point to 70.1.

American Can, Allied Chemical and Bohn Aluminum got up a point or so, but most gains were restricted to small fractions. Pullman, which dropped 2⅜, and Safeway Stores, off 3⅜, were weak spots. United States Smelting, American Smelting and other nonferrous metal shares were firm, the gain in the price of gold and silver abroad this week offsetting their loss of popularity as inflation hedges.

Foreign Exchange Watched.

The financial community continued to watch the action of foreign exchanges for a clew to the meaning of movements in domestic security and commodity markets. At the moment both the British pound and European gold currencies showed rallying tendencies after their declines the past week.

The downswing in commodity prices became more marked as the renewed break in grains carried the December wheat below 96 cents a bushel. The moody index of spot commodity prices was at the lowest since the end of July. Rubber futures at the close showed losses ranging up to nearly ¾ of a cent a pound.

Steel observers saw a promise of more buying of steel later in the year, but actual operations have changed little. The Iron Age estimated the current operating rate of the industry at 24 per cent of capacity against 23½ per cent a week ago. Electric power output last week increased moderately over the preceding week without altering appreciably the comparison with 1933.

Wool Market.

Boston, Oct. 3 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Interest in domestic wools in Boston continued to be centered mostly on wools suitable for the woolen trade. However, some further direct buying was reported and prices slightly higher than those recently quoted. The foreign wool markets were showing a better tone according to sales reported by private concerns in Boston. Some advices were to the effect that prices were slightly higher in Bradford and Brisbane. The Australian market was receiving reported support from the continent and Japan, and a very limited amount of buying was reported for American accounts.

Farm Products Begin October With Irregular Price Trends

Prevailing Downward Drift of September Is Still in Evidence; Cotton Declined Slightly Further; Grain, Live Stock, Vegetables Drop; Corn Stronger.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.)

Farm products were somewhat irregular, weak and unsettled at the beginning of October. The prevailing downward price trend of September was in evidence the last week of that month in such leading staples as cotton, grain, live stock, butter and vegetables, mainly owing to larger market receipts.

Best grades of eggs sold higher, and general position continued firm, because of decreasing supplies.

Poultry, except fowls, tended lower; also most kinds of fruits and vegetables, as supplies increase, but cooler weather tends to stimulate demand for the more perishable food products.

Cotton Market Sags.

Prices of cotton declined slightly further near the beginning of October. Relatively large ginnings, continued small sales of unfinished cotton cloth at lower prices, and small exports for the season to date, were conditions making for lower market values. Such influences are offset to some extent by increased domestic mill buying and continued sales of substantial quantities of cotton products to retailers.

Inquiries for spot cotton in New England and Southern mill centers are increasing. Prices for most standard unfinished cotton cloths declined following the general opening of cotton mills. Sales continued slow. Some conditions are favorable to an increase in domestic consumption of raw cotton during October and November compared with recent months.

The more important of these features are the settlement of the cotton textile strike, increases in sales of cotton cloth to retailers, the apparent reduction in manufacturers' stocks of goods, and the indications of business improvement following the summer recession.

Corn Position Stronger.

Corn was the one firm feature of the grain market, reflecting the short domestic supplies and smaller out-turns in other important producing areas. The new corn loan plan has increased the loan value of corn stored on farms from 45 to 55 cents per bushel, extended the maturity date to June 30, 1935. Holders of notes can not call loans until corn reaches 85 cents or more per bushel at Chicago. Country marketings decreased.

Market stocks, however, have reached new high levels. The firmness in the foreign corn situation is a strengthening feature in domestic markets. The United States is near an import basis, particularly at Atlantic Coast ports.

Domestic cash wheat markets, with slightly downward price trend, were rather dull in late September and milling inquiry was slow, despite relatively light supplies. Minneapolis inspections showed a fairly large quantity of Canadian durum wheat. Choice milling durum brought over $1.50 per bushel. Marketings of winter wheat continued to decrease.

The rye market was weak and lower, despite small current supplies. Oats markets were slightly weaker. Barley markets were weak and unsettled, with some slackening in demand for cash grain. December barley at Minneapolis declined about ⅞ cent and premiums on malting types were lowered slightly.

Feed Market Weak.

The feed markets were lower in late September. Continued improvement in fall pastures caused a further slackening in demand. Average feed prices declined about 3 per cent further. Wheat feeds were independently weak and declined $1 to $3 per ton.

High protein feeds were unsettled with cottonseed meal quoted slightly higher at most points while linseed meal and other concentrates sold at somewhat lower prices, except on the Pacific Coast. Gluten feed held steady, but hominy feed and alfalfa meal were quoted at 50 cents to $1 under mid-September prices.

Hogs Decline Sharply.

The decline in hog values at Chicago for the last week of September figures mostly 65@75c per 100 pounds. Fat lambs shared in the decline to the extent of a 25@40c break.

A bright spot in the week's trading was a continued broad outlet for feeding lambs, which held prices close to the preceding week's closing levels, despite liberal supplies. With the exception of hogs, marketings were materially in excess of the corresponding week last year. Declines in slaughter cattle varied from mostly 25c on medium and lower grades to an average loss of around 50c on good and choice grades of steers, Chicago basis.

The average cost of native steers at Chicago for slaughter figures about $8 or fully $2 higher than a year ago, while the average cost of stocker and feeder steers, at approximately $3.90 at that market, was substantially the same as a year earlier. Wool prices were mostly unchanged, but demand increased with reopening of mills which had been closed during the strike.

Egg Trend Upward.

Prices of eggs have advanced seasonably, but somewhat less rapidly than in August this year or in September last year. The limited supply of fresh eggs has caused dealers to continue to draw heavily upon storage reserves, and stocks again show a healthy decrease.

At the present time, prices on Middle Western, mixed colors, are about 4 to 5 cents higher than a year earlier, but nearby Eastern and Pacific Coast whites are approximately the same.

Federal Bonds Stage Rallies; Others Firm

General Market Unchanged as Sales Climb to $9,015,000.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—U. S. Government securities recorded substantial recoveries and other loans displayed a fairly firm undertone in today's quiet bond market.

Transfers totaled $9,015,000, par value, compared with $7,846,000 yesterday. The turnover in the Federal section amounted to about $2,040,000, against $1,710,000 in the previous session.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 83.3.

Sentiment for Federals.

Sentiment for the Government list improved considerably when it was found that the Treasury, instead of attempting to support its bonds during the heaviness of the past week, had actually done some selling for its various investment accounts.

The conclusion was that, if the Treasury does come in to bolster the list, the market might respond briskly.

While the volume of transactions in the Federal group was not nearly as large as in some recent sessions, advances ranged from 1-32d to 18-32ds of a point, except in farm mortgage 3s, which closed 12-32ds lower, at 96.13. The other guaranteed issues were active and 9-32ds to 18-32ds improved.

Rails Are Best.

Among the corporation division, the rails probably were the best. Bonds of Chicago & North Western and New Haven advanced 1 to 2 or more points on further optimism regarding new financing plans. Improvement was also shown by liens of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Pacific.

Bonds of Paramount were in demand at advances of a point or so and issues of Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, McKesson, International Telephone, Goodyear and Detroit Edison did better.

Various South American obligations, including those of Argentina and Chile, were a trifle reactionary. Irregularities predominated elsewhere in the foreign department.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed In Quiet Sales

Specialties Provided Most Changes; Trading Totals 93,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Quotations were somewhat mixed on the Curb exchange today. Specialties provided the principal price changes. Metals were a bit easy while utilities, oils and alcohols ruled fairly steady.

The trend was slightly higher during the early part of the session but a mild reaction set in during the late afternoon. Activity was restricted throughout.

General Tire & Rubber toppled some six points on small offerings. Parker Rust Proof receded a point. Singer Manufacturing set a new 1934 high at 197½, up 2½. Pan-American Airways, Sherwin Williams, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Interstate Hosiery firmed around a point each. Anglo-American Persian Oil rose 3.

Newmont and Lake Shore Mines were off fractionally. Slight changes appeared in Swift & Co., Wright Hargreaves, International Petroleum, American Gas, Aluminum Co., and American Cynamid B.

Transfers approximated 93,000 shares compared with 90,000 yesterday.

Rediscounts Decrease in 5th Bank Area

Richmond, Oct. 3 (AP).—Rediscounts of member banks in the Fifth Federal Reserve District decreased $3,000 in the month ended September 15, but the Reserve Bank itself advanced during the period $80,000 on industrial loans, giving a net increase of $77,000 in total earning assets, the bank's report disclosed.

The portfolio of open market paper and holdings of Government securities remained unchanged during the month. Circulation of Federal Reserve notes rose by more than the seasonal amount, advancing $14,512,000, "probably due," says the report, "to the opening of tobacco markets in North Carolina and to early cotton sales."

Reserve deposits of member banks rose by $7,388,000, "carrying reserves farther in excess of legal requirements."

A comparison of condition figures for September 15, 1934, with the same date in 1933, shows a further decline of nearly $10,000,000 in rediscounts, which the report says were very small a year ago, while holdings of Government securities rose by $35,592,000, and total earning assets increased $25,894,000.

Circulation of Federal Reserve notes rose by $18,899,000 during the past year, due in part, says the report, to higher prices prevailing in many lines this year, and member bank reserve deposits increased by $64,095,000.

Discussing the reports regularly submitted by 28 member banks in 10 leading cities of the district, the report says all figures in their combined statement were larger this year than last except the loan and rediscount figures. Figures for debits to individual accounts for this year were $135,683,000 or 21.4 per cent higher than those for last year, with 20 or 23 reporting cities showing an increase. Those which failed to gain were Charleston and Greenville, S. C., and Lynchburg, Va.

Gossip of New York Markets

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Bankers here were particularly interested in the reference in President Roosevelt's fireside talk to the Nation Sunday night, to the aid extended by British banks to their government in England's struggle with depression.

It was assumed the President referred especially to the brilliant success of the British treasury in refunding its $10,000,000,000 war loan early in 1932. Holders of the 5 per cent war loan bonds responded with unexpected unanimity to the treasury's offer of 3½ per cent bonds in exchange.

Another feature of the part played by the British banks in the fight against depression was their increase in investments between the end of 1931 and the middle of 1932. This was partly involuntary, it is pointed out, since the liquidation of loans and the low level of short-term money rates compelled British banks to seek bonds for employment of their assets.

The ten London clearing banks, representing the bulk of the Nation's bank resources, increased their investments from 296,000,000 pounds to about 550,000,000 pounds in this period. Almost the entire amount of British bank investments, probably more than 90 per cent on the average, is in government securities since the British institutions do not ordinarily invest in corporate or foreign bonds or stocks.

Since the British national debt was virtually static during this period, yields on Governments securities naturally declined, lending strength to other bonds and paving the way for a revival of capital flotations, especially for refunding many corporation issues on a lower interest basis.

British banks do not, on the other hand, hold anything like the proportion of the national debt held by the American banks. Out of a total of national debt of about £7,750,000,000 the 10 London clearing banks owned government securities in the neighborhood of £500,000,000 on June 30. This was exclusive of treasury bills, which they held in the amount of perhaps £250,000,000, it is estimated these institutions thus held less than 10 per cent of the national debt.

American banks, on the other hand, hold nearly 40 per cent of the Government's debt. The weekly reporting member banks, which might be considered as roughly comparable in scope to the London clearing banks, were $6,600,000,000 of Government securities on September 19, or almost 25 per cent of the National debt of $27,000,000,000. A year ago, they held about 22 per cent of the National debt. In the past year, the National debt has risen some $4,000,000,000, and the reporting banks' holdings of "Governments" some $1,500,000,000.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Home rails were firm on the stock exchange yesterday owing to satisfactory traffic returns. Gilt-edged securities and German bonds weakened, home industrials and oil shares were irregular, and mining shares held steady. Transatlantic issues improved. Rubber stocks were dull as the price of that commodity declined. The market closed dull.

Paris—The improvement in Wall street and other markets was reflected in the recovery of prices on the bourse yesterday. Buying orders resulting from an overnight position was also a contributing factor. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Stimulated by the improvement in steel shares, the bourse registered a more cheerful tone yesterday. The closing was sustained.

Wheat Values Slump Under Liquidation

Prices Cut to Lowest Levels Since Mid-July; All Grains Decline.

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—An avalanche of commission house selling that prompted general liquidation and brought stop-loss orders into execution engulfed the grain market just before the close today and prices were swept 2 to 3 cents lower.

Led by wheat, which incurred net losses for the day ranging from 2⅞ to 3⅛ cents a bushel, all grains broke sharply in the final half hour of trading, when apparently there was nothing in the trade news to account for such tremendous unloading operations.

Wheat prices were carried to the lowest levels since mid-July, December (new) deliveries closing at 95⅝ to 95⅞, approximately at the day's low, within 14 cents of the season's low. Corn lost 2¼ to 3⅜ cents, December (new) winding up at 73½ to 73¾; oats fell to 2⅝ to 3⅛, and rye and barley lost about 2 cents.

Selling Is Blamed.

Market gossip attributed the sharp break in wheat to an overwhelming weight of selling, part of which was accounted for by tired longs. A 2-cent drop in wheat at Liverpool was a depressing factor in American markets while Winnipeg's late fall of about 3 cents was to some extent in sympathy with action here.

The Chicago market was erratic most of the day and prior to the late break fluctuated nervously within a cent of yesterday's close. Uncertainty as to the marketing situation in Winnipeg, although the general manager of the Canadian wheat pool disclaimed any intentions of abandoning stabilization operations, was a disquieting factor.

Heavy selling from Eastern sources appeared on the downturn and stop-loss selling, particularly in many deliveries, was a most unsettling factor. Since August 10 December wheat here has lost almost 18 cents.

Provisions were only slightly lower, buoyed despite the action of grains by an improvement in hog values.

Trade Activity In California Resumes Rise

San Francisco, Calif.—Following the conclusion of the marine workers' strike in July, California business statistics for August showed for the most part a quick resumption of activity at or near the levels which prevailed before the strike. Check transactions (bank debits), which in July had fallen 6.8 per cent below the July, 1933, level, increased in August to 11.6 per cent above the level of August, 1933, making the corresponding January-August increase 12 per cent over a year ago. Department store sales, compared with those of a year ago, showed a dollar-volume decrease of 12 per cent in July, but an increase of 4.8 per cent in August, and an increase of 7.2 per cent for January-August. Life insurance sales, although they fell off somewhat during July, were still 4 per cent larger than those of July, 1933, and January-July sales were 11 per cent ahead of those of the same 1933 period.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Threatening the Landlord By Harry J. Tuthill

FINE STUFF! I FELL OVER A LADDER IN THE HALL.
THAT ARISTOCRATIC COUPLE WHO LOOKED AT THE FLAT NEXT DOOR MUST HAVE RENTED IT. THE LANDLORD IS HAVING THE DININGROOM PAPERED AND HE AND HIS OVERGROWN SON SPENT ALL MORNING HAMMERING ON THE BATHROOM PIPES AND HOLLERING AT EACH OTHER.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 10-4.
DECORATING, EH? WELL WHILE HE'S WARM ON THAT SUBJECT DID YOU SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN ABOUT PAPERING THE FRONT BEDROOM?
THE FIRST TIME I WENT OVER TO TALK TO HIM HE HAD HIS HEAD CAUGHT BEHIND THE BATH TUB AND HIS SON, WITH THE PAPER HANGERS, WERE TRYING TO GET HIM LOOSE.
THE SECOND TIME I WENT OVER, THE WOMAN UPSTAIRS WAS ARGUING WITH HIM ABOUT PAPERING HER LIVING ROOM.
AND THE THIRD TIME HE WAS GONE.
WELL WE'LL HAVE PLENTY OF CHANCES TO TALK WITH HIM WHEN HE'S TODDLING BACK AND FORTH TRYING TO GET THE NEXT RENT INSTALLMENT OUT OF US.
DON'T WORRY. I'M GOING TO TELL HIM YOU SAID IF HE DOESN'T PAPER THAT FRONT BEDROOM, YOU WILL. I KNOW THAT WILL BRING HIM TO TIME.

DICK TRACY Life Begins

Walt Mason

Girl Reformer.

When my young and lovely niece came to me and spoke a piece, saying she would marry Pete, I remarked, "He is a beat. He's of little earthly use, he has habits rather loose, he is lazy, people say, and declines to put up hay. He may have, I freely own, virtues now to me unknown, virtues which are good as wheat, but men say he is a beat. He is always dodging gents who have loaned him fifty cents. Doubtless, Iris, you have dreamed that his faults may be redeemed; by your love you'll lead him back to the highly moral track; but I warn you, and repeat, no one can reform a beat. He may quit the poker games, and quit flirting with the dames; he may quit, by your sweet means, hitting up the slot machines; he may quit all sorts of sins, dodging many snares and gins, still his ruin is complete, he will always be a beat." "You're a dotard," said my niece, "you are full of axle grease. Love can guide the wayward feet, and reform the chronic beat. Just because Pete owes some bills you predict all sorts of ills. When he has a loving wife who will regulate his life, he will quit the foolish trail and high morals will prevail." So she went and married Pete, innocent and good and sweet, and he gave a phony check to the pastor, Reverend Heck. And she dug up every cent that for honeymooning went. And she came back to my door, yesterday, distraught and sore. "Uncle, I've forsaken Pete; he is just a chronic beat. I can't stand it any more; you were right, you blamed old bore."
